Duncansville, Pa.

WANTED: LARGE GLASS MARBLES Closed on Sabbath

HI FOLKS: Had a good theory. Check the labor leaders who abuse their power. Unions are needed for the working man, just as badly as Christians need churches, but the rank and file abuses should run them, not a few power mad individuals who are getting richer and more powerful by the toil and sweat of the working man. Had thinks the working man will support the politician or legislator who stands up and fights the abuses in organized labor. Also he thinks that the working man will support our congressmen and senators who inaugurate and push through laws to protect the millions of stock holders who employ, and in fact, are the foundation of the economy and welfare of this country. Cheerio!

LOOKING FOR A SMALL MIRACLE?

Lots of people are looking for real "sleepers" or rare, exquisite, antique cut glass and other antiques at ridiculously low give-away prices. (Confidentially, so are we). We also buy and sell on the more realistic basis of paying a fair price and then selling at prices that still allow dealers who purchase from us a wide margin for profit.

As far as we know, we have the finest, largest stock of antique cut glass anywhere. If you are a dealer or consistent collector, we will send you sample list for stamped self-addressed envelope or lists issued approximately twice a month for three months for $1. We also have huge amounts of fine hand painted china, all kinds of glass and a general line of antiques.

BESIDES what's pictured here, we have all type LAMPS, CHAIRS, etc., etc. THIS ain't no parlor shop, there's buildings with stuff stuffed in! The approaching Santa rat-race may find you needing special things. WRITE US! We answer so fast your head'll swim, especially if you enclose stamp (AIRMAIL BEST). We pack day order comes in. SOMETIMES THE DAY BEFORE! Still lots unsold items in past ads. Big things go freight or express, we choose cheapest way if left to us. But ALWAYS SHIPPING CHARGES COLLECT. Add MOOCHIA EXTRA for mailables, we refund excess, politely dunn you if not enough. No C.O.D.'s! 20c brings clearer pictures, should you want to waste 20c.

1. FABULOUSLY GAY WALNUT PORTFOLIO TABLE! Front drops down for writing or sketching or whatever your talents run to. ORNATELY & PROFUSELY line-carved and touched with gold. Oval REPOUSSE BRASS medallion on front signed "GERMAIN 1862", portraying Pan & cherubs in forest. 32" x 58" tall. Fine condition. Was $65.00 — NOW $56.50.
2. Brass framed hall lamp, 4 panes BOHEMIAN RED & frosted etched glass, design of gay cherubs on pedestals, playing tambourines, in arched trellis arbors with scroly flowers. Brass quite clean, no inner lamp, not wired. A STUNNER! — WAS $42.00 — NOW $37.00.
3. HOLLY LOVERS! TAKE NOTE! Brass frame hanging lamp holding nice pattern clear glass font. 14" shade has white background shading to palest tint of pink with HOLLY BERRIES & LEAVES! Green and red of course. LOADS of prisms, 3 tiers of 'em. Not polished, not wired, no smoke bell. Even so, I have that gall to ask 65 bucks!
4. Revoltingly simple compared to above! But may appeal, I hope, to the reserved type. Brass frame hanging lamp, pretty pattern clear glass font. 14" shade is white & pink ground with clusters of small yellow & orange flowers, with BLUE leaves — poetic license you know! No prisms whatsoever, BUT HAS SMOKEBELL! Not polished, not wired. Priced for the conservative bank roll—$32.00.
5. AGAIN! Brass frame hanging lamp, prisms around circle balance weight above chimney. This one for MOSS ROSE LOVERS, for that's what's painted on the 14" shade, pale green ground, pink moss rosebuds & deep green leaves. Quite like diamond point pattern clear glass font. No smoke bell, not polished, not wired.—$34.50.

6. CHILD'S CUPBOARD, PINE! No doubt specially made by Pop or Gramp to imitate Momma's kitchen cupboard, with monogram open carved in top—JL. About 75 yrs. of age. Base 11" deep, shelves 5½" deep, 49" extreme height, 25½" wide. Iron hardware. Evidence of originally having doors at top. Looks better without. Has been stripped of paint, needs good sanding. Needs no repairs.—$48.00.
 7. ABSOLUTELY NICEST PINE LIFT — TOP COMMODE to enter these portals. Spool trimmed bases & towel arms yet! Needs no repairs, but brown paint to remove. 27½" across, plus towel arms, 18" deep, 29" high. GRAB THIS ONE, even if price shocks you!—$45.00.
 8. Old Fashioned Parlor Lamp, handled BRASS BASE needs polishing. 10" shade is FROSTY (no color) with berry & leaf design left in the clear glass. Slight roughness top rim. Not wired. 19½" tall plus chimney—$24.00. Just like my POOR Grandma had — my other Grandma had a COLORED ONE!
 9. FANTASTIC! PHENOMINAL! ARTISTIC! FRENCH BRONZE CLOCK adorned with 2 large Herons on base. Porcelain face with visible escapement. Top draped with white metal roses, fruit, nuts, topped with a vine-apple. One bit of this garland broken off at left. Back door & bell missing. Face has name of SHREVE, CRUMP & LOW BOSTON. No junk! Works stamped "MEAILLE de BRONZE, MARTIE et Cie." It doesn't run, but has key and pendulum, so you restore! 46½" tall—$110.00.
 10. Simpler Pine lift-top commode, with serpentine shaped front lid edge and overhang. Wood knobs not quite a match. No repairs needed, but has paint to remove. 18x27½", 29" high. Simpler price—$38.00.
- WE HAVE OTHERS — we can't sell them cheap — WE BUY GOOD ONES!
11. 32 ft. of GAY FANCY VICTORIAN IRON FENCING INCLUDING GATE! and only 22" high, ideal to close off part of courtyard terrace, herb garden or sunplein. 2 posts 27" high. Lock on gate however, in sad state! But otherwise fine! Now painted black. — $150.00.
 12. SCARCE, beautiful & desirable ASTRAL LAMP. 26½" tall, 5½" sq. marble base, needed brass column topped in brass scrolls, brass leaf embossed font. OUT-STANDING frosted cut to clear shade, floral & grape motif, 12 spear crystal prisms with sq. & round "buttons", 7½" long. Burner is not original. No chimney. Not polished, not wired. Made to compliment a Colonial interior! THIS I will NOT reduce! Worth every bit of $95.00.
 13. SPITTOON (pardon the vulgarity) in Orange Carnival Glass! Hexagon shape. Melon veining embossing all over, 2 minor flakes top rim. Nice for floral arrangements—$5.50.
- PLEASE NOTE! WRITE your wants in Carnival, we are constantly getting it in, tell us what patterns and pieces you seek, we'll write when they show up. This glass is coming up in the world, but fast!

14. Iron Boot Jack with bald eagle's heads, 11½" long. $5.50.
15. Walnut chair, one only, no-arm type. Frame good, seat needs recaning—$8.00.

WE'RE ALSO GOOD at matching chairs for customers. Have helped many complete their sets, sometimes PRONTO — sometimes takes years. ENCOURAGING, ain't it!

16. PINE wash stand, solid top & so very handsome DOVETAILED flared out splash-back, with bits of age cracks, but needing no major repairs, but paint YES! to remove & DECALS yet! I'm a bit cracked but still desirable (?) and useful! 36½" extreme height, work top 15½" across, 22½" across flared back—$24.00.
17. Walnut wall TOWEL RACK, some burl trim, originally had more trim at top, now missing & NOT NEEDED. Holds slightly m-th-eaten piece wool neelepoint. But frame REAL PURTY. 26½" wide—$8.50 and finish good.
18. Rim. (opaque, or opalescent if you prefer). Rayed base. 13¼" tall, same era as Carnival—$2.50.
19. PAIR of Carnival glass vases, clear glass bottom half, remainder ORANGE, alternating ribbed & diamond point panels. 12" tall—$7.00 pr. Interesting glass workers' slip-of the tools occurred in pinched-in rim!
20. Fine little 7¼x9¾" OIL PAINTING ON BOARD. Unsigned, but firmly believe late 18th century, of the school of FRAGONARD. The cherubic naked babes by a brook, 2 of whom are playfully pouring water from a jug over the other who is sleeping, resting on elbow. The GOLD LEAF frame, 15x16½", lovely and appropos, but damaged at 3 corners—$48.00.
21. Walnut chair, one arm tightened with screw what shows, & chip out of arm underneath where it DON'T show (no harm). Has BRAND NEW CANE SEAT, finish usable as is — $19.00.
22. VODOO (?) DRUM — should hang onto this to drum customers in! Carved from a log. 27½" high, 8½" diam. Gayly painted, but slightly faded, with house, palm trees & name HAITI. Orig. head good, but needs be made more taut—$23.00.
23. 10" TIN concave colored plate, portraying POLO PLAYERS, loops in back to hang, fine condition—$3.50.
24. 10½" TIN colored plate, Italian Beauty on Portico, carrying Amphora filled with flowers. Stunning green, gold & brown border. UN-USED! — no holes to hang—$3.50.
25. 15" tall Bisque head doll, marked "Japan" with mark as in Fawcett, P. 69. Orig. brown wig, very long hair needs combing. (Would hate to face her at breakfast!) Composition body, one hand chipped off, strings need tightening & head needs reattaching—$9.50.
26. Iron COAL SCUTTLE with grey granite enamelled HINGED LID, few bits of enamelling flaked off, truly you can't object to these defects, for it is a HANDSOME piece resembling a TURTLE. 3 embossed iron legs, lid shell & scroll embossed. 15x20", 11" high. Was $28.50—NOW $24.00.

PRICES INCLUDE CRATING — HOW DOES HARPIN DO IT?

P. O. Box 1097

Providence, Rhode Island

A magnificent pine lift top commode, one of the rarest we have ever seen. This is a hand made exquisite piece dovetailed on all four corners and with dovetailed drawers. It is small, the most wanted size, only 26" across the front and 33" tall. It is 17" deep. For a bar, or for a loud speaker, or phonograph it can't be matched. The drawers are fascinating too. These are square, one on top of the other beside the lower cabinet. Perfectly beautiful, made in 1840. It's lovely enough for any room in the house. Price $58.00.

A great big Pennsylvania chalk apple that is a bank. This is an old one all painted and decorated, and it's very unusual. Diameter 4", very big, some wear on the paint but it's extremely unusual. Price $5.00.

A milk glass covered dish with a long-eared bunny for a cover. The pattern of the base is "picket" with squared off corners. It's old, it's in wonderful condition. Measures 5½x3¾", very good. Price $16.50.

An old glass candy container in the shape of a R.R. engine with cow catcher. It is 6½" long and 3½" tall and it's complete. Price $5.00.

Very fine old iron kettle, beautiful hand wrought bale handle with twists toward the rat-tail fastenings and standing on 2" tall splayed feet. We took this out of a great fireplace in Maine where it had been for over a hundred years. It's 10" in diameter, perfect. Price $14.50.

Very handsome brass tinder box, a very old one from jolly old England where the Yule log was a "must," indeed they would have frozen without it. This is hinged, beautifully chased like fine jewelry, it is long, has a curved back for hanging, and it's very handsome. Lovely fire-place decoration besides being useful! Price $16.50.

A pair of very handsome old clear pressed glass lamps 11" tall. The foot and font are molded in one piece. They are square, and the feet are extremely elaborate, large turned under scrolls, between the feet on four sides there is a delicate medallion. The glass is old, it is shot with imperfections and some bubbles, but they are really beautiful. They have brass caps with screws for the burners. They are perfect. Price $18.00.

A wonderful old pine dough tray we picked up in Vermont. It's 28" long and 16" wide, and it has the old pegged through legs that spraddle, and a fine top and the top surface is about 19" from the floor and we don't know a better chairside companion. It keeps the house in order too because it holds so very much, papers, magazines, knitting, etc.—you know how it is! This is thick beautiful pine morticed—it's a peach, and refinished! Price $27.50.

Perfectly wonderful old and very small Bennington ink well. It's the smiling face of a gentleman wearing an old French sleeping cap with a tassel! Has two openings, little round ones. One is for the ink supply and the other is a pen rest. It's enchanting, measures 3" long and about 2" wide and it's in full relief. Really rare. Price $13.50.

A rare piece of Historical Blue in proof condition, a 7" plate "The Arms of the State of Rhode Island." This is the only size this design was ever made in and the outside of the Arms of the State of Penna., it's probably the rarest of the series. It's a very rich dark blue, a beautiful piece but only for those who know and understand the history of our country in ceramics. Price $80.00.

PROSPECT, KENTUCKY

Christmas is almost with us, and old Santa has advised me to suggest the items below to my many clients for a merrier Christmas. Shop early and avoid disappointment.

A lovely old bright copper kettle, 3 qts. capacity with tapered sides and a goose neck spout. It has an applied solid copper handle and stands 12" tall overall. This pretty piece will certainly be welcomed by someone having an Early American kitchen. Price $27.50.

A collectors item; an Amber hob-nailed barber's bottle with a 4" bulbous body, about 9" tall overall, and complete with a white porcelain squirt type stopper. Two of the hob-nails have very slight chips from them, however, these are hardly noticeable. Price $20.00.

A set of 6 Meissen (onion pattern) coasters. The Meissen base is about 2 1/2" in diameter and is surrounded with a silver plated gallery 1/2" high. These will make a lovely addition to some collectors Meissen. Price $40.00 for the set.

A wonderful piece of hand carving; a cow on a carved base that is 4" by 11 1/2", and the overall height is 7". The carving is complete in every detail and old "Bossie" seems almost real. A fine gift for a cattleman or raiser of live stock. Price $40.00.

A very very nice 5 piece silver coffee or tea service. An oval glass tray about 18" x 10" with a silver plated rod gallery, creamer, sugar bowl with top, waste pot, and a 6 cup pot with top. This set is not too old, but has just been replated and is in like new condition. The set was made by Van Bergh S P Co. of Rochester, N. Y. and bears their pattern number 495. This set will indeed make someone real happy on Christmas morning. Price $100.00.

A wonderful and useful decorating piece; an old English stick barometer, approximately 35" tall through the round final. Can be made useful through the addition of some more mercury and re-calibration to your altitude. In use for many years on "Old Jake", however, what with Radar, Radio, and the weather reporters we can get along without it. Price $135.00.

Have a wonderful selection of new hand made quilts, pieced and appliqued, all made by the same person. Some in pairs, send for a detailed listing on these. They will make lovely Xmas gifts, and will be cherished for many many years.

The organ assembly is about completed, just a few minor things left to be done. I have already started practicing the Carols, and will be playing them in earnest before the Yuletide Season.

Prices quoted are net. No COD's.

electrify your Oil Lamps

just "a twist of the wrist" with
NALCO SOLID BRASS ADAPTERS

FUN, fast, and easy. Simply twist out the old burner, then twist in the new Nalco Solid Brass Adapter. Your lamp . . . still as lovely and quaint as ever . . . is ready in moments for safe, electrical operation. And with Nalco bulbs that look like real flame, you have all the grace and charm of the original oil lamp itself. Standard sizes, 1, 2, 3, Hornet and Nutmeg, with switch and cord included.

Three attractive styles . . . finest quality . . . lowest cost, too!

OILITE

A wick-type adapter for standard base bulbs. Ideal for a reading and working lamp.

CANDELABRA

ELECTRIC WICK

Truly enchanting. This wick-type adapter accommodates Nalco's unique Wick-O-Lite bulb . . . looks just like a burning oil wick turned low.

"The Blue Bird Antique Shop"

Gladstone 3-4276

EVERY PIECE PERFECT. Pure porcelain (which never has crazing) 81 PIECES, signed Seb Bavaria, table setting, signed hand-painted gold borders, gold initialed B its only decoration. A beautiful set with quiet dignity. 12-10" dinner plates, 12-7 1/2" luncheon plates, 12-5 1/2" pie plates, 13-3 1/2" plates (these match perfectly but have no initial B), 12 saucers, 16 1/2 x 11 1/2" large platter, 10 1/2 x 9" round tureen with lovely handles, 12 1/2 x 9" oblong handled vegetable dish, gravy on attached tray, 6 cups, 4 saucers, 6 butter plates—$88.00. 1931 8 Lincoln head penny. Excellent condition. Only 866,000 were minted—$17.50.

Cut, glass salt, pepper set, sterling tops (marked)—$6.00.

Lovely old Blue Delft teapot—a genuine study, so old the pattern has irregularities and it shows Chinese influence. Under-glaze decoration on soft milky white. Specialists tell us a rich, clear blue on a white ground is always fine. This teapot, the Seb Bavaria set above, and the following tureen were brought from Europe years ago on various trips by a couple who have an island in Lake Superior named for them. They died 35 years ago and are remembered for the quality of their possessions and humanitarian works. It is perfect except one small flake on the spout—has the chrysanthemums, peonies and flowers and trees of the old porcelain, butterflies, pomegranate plant, charming borders in blue scroll. Little round knob with turtle painted on it tops the cover. Six-cup capacity—$24.50.

Marked Habsburg China, M. Z. Austria, Crown mark, shield, B.T.O. and a dot, most lovely pure white tureen with double ribbon bow handles and cover final. Raised meadow flower under bow on cover, 11 1/2 x 7 1/2", and it is beautiful—$18.50.

One of the earliest teapots put out by Lipton Tea Co. Prettiest blue, between Alice blue and powder blue—$6.00.

Four perfect, lovely shaped all white marked Haviland, France, 9" dinner plates and 1-6" plate, matching—$6.50.

14 1/2 x 12 1/2" framed engraving (charming old frame) of the painting of Nell Gwynn, Charles II and his friends by William Hogarth. On the back is the original paper which says: "Engraved from the original picture in the possession of John Poyer, Esqre, to whom this plate is respectfully, with permission, dedicated by his obedient servant Hogarth." This Hogarth Coat-of-Arms is on this too. The writing is in old script with brown ink. The engraving is in softest loveliest colors, every detail fascinating, and the engraving such a size that it is unobtrusive. Hogarth is one of our greatest. His doctrine was that a curve is the line of beauty. He sketched a face appealing to him on the spot, on his finger-nail. His engravings earned fame for him—$22.50.

Did you know topazes are to be found in all colors? Especially the precious or Brazilian topaz, though yellow is the most usual. Also topaz is doubly refractive and has perfect cleavage. Flexible topaz bracelet with flower enamel trim, very pretty—$9.50.

Perfect Milk glass cracker jar, satin finish, pastel colored flowers and leaf branch decoration. Resilvered cover and hand as well as neck band. (Decor in soft pink and rose-pink)—$32.50.

The rare three-kitten Milk glass cracker jar. Perfect, lovely, old colors. Old paint scroll work all over in grays and cover with kittens, charming—$27.50.

Very rare Caramel Slag Cactus pattern cracker jar. No cover. Base so absolutely perfect. Pictured page 303, Belknap $57.50. (This glass is a flint glass formula created by Mr. Jacob Rosenthal and Belknap says we should abandon the name "Slag" and use only Caramel or "Chocolate," as the product is neither a slag nor an accident although no two pieces are ever exactly alike. Manufactured only from Nov. 1900 to June, 1903, and in addition, a few pieces at Fenton Art Glass Co., the demand for this glass has never been completely filled. Charles E. Beam was the leading designer and there are scarcely a dozen patterns known.)

Also very rare and perfect Cactus pattern Caramel cruet and matching stopper—$90.00.

Signed Quezal most unusual pattern (lop-sided squares with mottling) low bell-shaped glass shade, fine coloring—$6.75.

Unusual coloring, leaf bracket Caramel covered butter dish, edge shows rich opalescence. Marked marbelizing—$35.00.

Unmarked Japanese covered teapot. Perfect. Pure porcelain strainer inside. 4 cup. Lots of white background indicates quality. Two people in colorful town costumes on each side. Mt. Fuji dominates cover and one side as if speaking for one of the most mountainous countries in the world. Rust-pink birds are in flight, again telling us a story, that birds in Japan are finer and in more quantity than animals. Houses one with gold roof indicating a land of temples, and one in thatched brown, telling us of the fragility and short life of their houses. Butterflies tell us of the beautiful climate, and the green spout and handle trimmed in gold speak of the verdure of this island land. Really, isn't a Japanese teapot indeed wonderful?—$15.00.

Lovely Manhattan pattern covered cookie, cracker or biscuit jar. Wide pink stained glass border, sparkling pattern, like windows—$18.50.

And to complement this jar, a perfect four-piece table set—covered butter, creamer, covered sugar, spooner in the lovely Bent Buckle pattern with wide stained pink tops. (Rare to find a lovely old pattern like this with all pieces in mint condition). Kamm, Third Book, page 97. Clear, brilliant glass 1890. The buckle is pointed on each end and the end on the base extends hair way to the center. Some call the pattern Broken Buckle but this is not the reality—it is bent under. It is a most desirable, interesting pattern and has a lacy, glistening beauty—$48.50.

Very pretty apple green inverted rib tumbler, gold rim, natural color enamel flowers. So cheerful—$18.00.

And such a pretty hand-painted quatre foil shape creamer and covered sugar, signed by the painter whose delicate shading and yellow and pink roses survive him to speak for him. Sugar base 5 1/4 x 4 1/4", creamer 3 1/4 x 3 1/4". Really lovely—$10.75.

This is something beautiful, useful and so seldom found today. Limoges china, large soup ladle with delicate flowers. Beautifully curved handles—$18.50.

Parisian granite, Washington pattern, T. C. & F. Booth, England, perfect, covered tureen or large vegetable dish, 11 1/2" handle end to end. Crown mark. Maple leaf handle. Finals. Shaded gray Hawthorne blossoms and branches—$10.50.

Lovely Paneled Poppy pattern large bulbous, raised flowers (bowl and footed stand) Milk glass lamp. See Belknap, page 38—$16.50.

Rd Block perfect water pitcher. Rare. The genuine old hexagonal block. (Variants have square block). No scratching on the ruby blocks. Like new condition. Beautiful—$38.50. Covered butter, $23.50. Covered sugar, $14.50. Spooner, $11.50.

Perfect Spade ware very large marble in yellow, browns, blues. Could serve as paperweight. Collector's piece—$15.00.

Perfect and unusual 5 1/2" diameter marked Z. S. & Co., Bavaria, covered dish. Gold trim, large branch of ripening blackberries, leaves, branches on cover, peaches, pears, apples, gooseberries around bulbous part of base in lovely gay colors, hand-painted—$9.75.

Caramel Leaf bracket berry bowl and eight saucers—$96.00.

A real unusual is this Vintage Grape cake stand bearing the old British Registry mark right in the glass, right in the Grape pattern, which depicted gives us March 1, 1871. This mark was discontinued in 1884—$22.50.

Calrignom pendant (a brown smoky quartz) with a star in the stone, framed in Etruscan design and with Etruscan necklace. Nothing pure gold or extremely precious about it. It is just interesting and unusual. And quite a question as to how or when the star was formed—$15.00.

Cymophone stone for ring—the Chrysoberyl cat's eye. (Brown eye in high green stone with darker green spider-webbing)—$10.00.

Very old rope gold ring with garnets. One stone missing—$10.00.

String lovely blue satin beads connected by small white beads—$4.75.

Now a lovely bracelet. Flexible, made up of squarish Tourmalines with double refraction in blue and brown to a high degree, called dichroism. Doubly refracting stones always varying when looked at from different directions, so a Tourmaline piece is always a new wonder. Each stone is backed in sterling covered with engraved flowers so it is beautiful beneath too. To me Tourmalines are a wonder of nature. Did you know they come in all colors? This bracelet was given me by an Aunt before she died. In some ways it is very precious as she urged me from childhood to study and learn and did her utmost to open my eyes to all the wonders of the world. It was her idea that if we fail to see what is around us, we pass through a dark tunnel instead of seeing through windows—$28.50.

Many starred two-inch diameter amethyst pendant in roped sterling frame. The Orientals call them violet sapphires. We call them violet quartz. But this piece is lovely—it is cut in such a way that one can study and study it and always find a new star—$18.50.

Garnet earring that would make a lovely ring-setting. Marquise set (pointed oval) garnet with small stones around it—$9.50.

Leontine chain (long, like a guard chain) to which a watch was usually added—$9.50.

Two metal plaque done in repousse (pattern of beautiful lady in relief made by beating from the back)—$9.50.

Sautoir in most beautiful pattern, made of blue & steel colored very small beads that just glisten. Choice piece that makes most unusual and attractive necklace—$15.00.

Pair Staffordshire 10" plates, 1872. Covered with fan medallions in black and white, each fan having a different scene. One fan even has owls. Show Chinese influence. Unusuals. Each—$9.50.

Queen Victoria's Albert died in 1861. So these 8-10" Pratt dinner plates and four supper plates are real antiques as they were presentation pieces dedicated to him. On the back of each is: "To His Royal Highness, Prince Albert." The pattern is lovely in shades of rusts, browns, yellows in flowers and leaves and colored edges. Also a very large turkey platter, and deep, to match. All perfect—$88.00.

For the snuff box collector: English snuff box dated 1834. Brass one in fine condition. On the cover is the name of the town the man lived in, the date of his birth, the hour, and it was 4 a.m. A real interesting one and genuinely antique—$16.50. (This was his way of avoiding passing into nonentity).

Caramel Dolphin base, rich color—$24.50.

8" hunting dog head hand-painted plate and 7" one just like it. Hard to find. Both—$9.50.

Engraving in color of Washington in cross-frame with leaves at corners and one of Martha Washington, attractive. The pair (14x11")—$11.50.

Most unusual silver napkin ring with resting butterfly with wings upraised holding the ring, and on each side of ring is an attractively designed fan and handle—$10.50.

Gaudy Welsh covered teapot, $40.00.

Gaudy Welsh covered sugar, $35.00. (Two plates on which the above rest, 7" diameter, so with them).

Holly Amber perfect sauce dish, $75.00.

Bisque boy returning from fishing. Has fish on end of pole. 6 1/4" high. Quaint clothes. Unusual face. Nice piece—$9.50.

8" high, 10" wide, fine brass handle, brass rail. Just the right shape and size to hold magazines or to set beside a fireplace for wood—$8.75.

Sterling teaspoon, scrolled pattern handle. Pretty—$2.50.

Very lovely hand-painted plate, signed by La-portes, 9 1/4" diam. Autumn oak leaves turning color, and acorns. O.F.G. Austria, and wreath mark. In plum color is the mark of the painter. Pure porcelain. No crazing—$9.75.

Gold thimble—$6.75.

Two orange Carnival Grape Vintage footed wines. Each—$2.25.

Two very old, choice half-moon bone dishes marked Grant, Stonier Crown, N. D., ea. $2.00

Senator Robert La Follette Progressive campaign button—$1.25.

Green cut glass open salt & matching salt spoon—$1.75.

Green Majolica open oval salt 85 cents.

9" diameter dish, pink lustre trim, children in color playing, one with sunbonnet—$3.75.

Pair Mr. & Mrs. Carter ink bottles in color—$19.50.

Dated 1879 iron pencil rack—room for 10 pencils. Unusual—$9.50.

Four marked sterling Crown perfect 9" game plates, two with bears and cubs, two with rabbits and birds, hand-painted, ea. $9.50. (One each matching with slight chip and one small hairline on one, each $1.50).

13 1/2 x 11 1/4" platter with four hand painted moose—$18.50.

All these Game pieces have German lustre finish—are shaded in greens, rose, yellow, and have brook, trees, mountain, stones, woods, flowers, and gold).

Most lovely footed, resilvered, glass plateau, 9" diameter, $16.50. One not resilvered, but very nice—$9.50.

14x11" cross-frame with leaves with Kimmel & Voigt Fashion picture designed expressly for Demorest's Monthly, 5 Rue Scire, Paris and 14th St., N. Y. Most attractive and genuinely old—$8.50.

Stained pink glass border & clear Bull's Eye and Star water pitcher—$5.50.

Turkish Oriental Rugs

Collector's Quiz. Can you make 100 per cent?

Answers, pages 199 through 203

HOBBIES' general book on ANTIQUES

THE WORLD OF ANTIQUE ARTS

1. How did the libraries and temples of ancient Anatolia (Asia Minor) bring the religious, tribal, and social symbols of Persia, China, India, and Europe into Turkish rugs?
2. What designs did Mohammedans take out of Turkish rugs? Put in?
3. What color dominates Turkish rugs? What plant gave it?
4. How do Turkish prayer rugs differ in color?
5. Why is an arch or niche always found in a prayer rug? Is it the same shape for all Turkish prayer rugs?
6. What type of rug is Turkey's finest? Who usually makes it?
7. Of what materials are Turkish prayer rugs made? Are all Turkish prayer rug borders the same? Can you find the water pattern in the Ghiordes prayer rug? What does it mean?
8. Do the flowers in the Ghiordes, Ushak, and "Holbein" border look real, natural, growing? Or do they seem pressed flat?
9. What suggested the tile design to Turkish weavers? How did this type of rug come to be called Hispano-Moresque?
10. Why do most Turkish woolen yarns make thick knots? How many knots to the linear inch? Make a Turkish knot.
11. Is the Turkish rug pile long? How does the rug feel?
12. A Kilim or marriage bed cover has slits where the yarns turn back. It made a tent curtain before marriage. The bride could peep through these slits at her future husband.
13. Were Kilims made by tying knots? What other rugs were made by a Turkish girl for her hope chest?
14. Scholars say Turkish rugs have a "mosaic" look when worn down because different colored threads were put into one yarn for the eye to blend into the wanted color. Could impressionists, like Renoir, have taken the idea of picking up different colored paints on their brush for the eye to blend in their paintings, from this source?

"America Goes to the Polls"

J. DOYLE DEWITT, President of the Travelers Insurance Companies.

Mr. DeWitt's collection is the most outstanding of its kind in the world.

President Abraham Lincoln's hand became so swollen one time after a day of handshaking with his admirers that he cut off and whittled a piece of broomstick to hold in his hand so it would not tremble while he posed for a sculptor. This hand, cast with the whittled broomstick in it, is but one item of more than 20,000 in an exhibit now focusing attention on American presidential elections in Hartford, Conn., through election day, November 8, 1960.

This collection of campaign mementos from George Washington's day to the present has been arranged by The Travelers Insurance Companies in support of the national "Get Out The Vote" campaign.

The exhibit is the private collection of J. Doyle DeWitt, President of The Travelers Insurance Companies. Mr. DeWitt was born in Iowa, attended Drake University, became interested in American history and, in the course of 25 years, has collected items recalling every U. S. presidential election. More than 1,000 pieces on Abraham Lincoln alone are part of this "America Goes to the Polls" exhibit at The Travelers' 52 Prospect Street building in Hartford, Conn.

The colorful story of election hoopla is told through political cartoons, campaign gadgets, buttons, banners, slogans, songs, hats, kerosene torches used in torchlight parades, etc., highlighting all of the vigorous infighting of America's electoral past. From the moment one enters the exhibit hall, the "America Goes to the Polls" story unfolds chronologically beginning in 1789 with George Washington.

One of the featured items at the Hartford exhibit is a recording of the actual voices of every president of the United States from Benjamin Harrison down to the present. It includes speeches by Grover Cleveland, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Harry S. Truman (imitating H. V. Kaltenborn), and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Also on this "Candidate's Speak" recording are the voices of William Jennings Bryan - giving his immortal "Cross of Gold" speech, Eugene Debs, FULL DINNER PAIL WINS - The election of 1900 pitted William Jennings Bryan against William McKinley for the second time. Once again, Bryan was defeated as the Republicans swept the country with the theme, "Four more years of the full dinner pail." Numerous glass and metal "full dinner pails" were used to bring this message to the people.

EARLY POLITICAL PARADER - Shown here are campaign items from the 1884 election of Grover Cleveland. His major opponent was James G. Blaine. The two girls are admiring a marching uniform and torchlight helmet typical of those worn by the "Plumed Knights," Blaine's marching organization. Torchlight parades were a colorful and frequent addition to many of these early campaigns.

FIRST PRESIDENTIAL BUTTON - For George Washington's inauguration in 1789, the button makers of New York and Connecticut made souvenir buttons to commemorate the event. Many of them bore the inscription, "Long Live the President," while others showed an eagle surmounted by a sunburst to symbolize the birth of the new government. As Washington traveled by carriage through New England that fall, many such buttons, worn by his admirers, were in evidence.

FIRST USE OF DONKEY - Political cartoonist Thomas Nast depicted Democratic sentiment as a kicking donkey in a cartoon of his that appeared in the January 15, 1870 issue of Harper's Weekly, thus creating a symbol for the party which has been carried on through the years.

NAST CARTOON - A section of the "America Goes to the Polls" exhibit includes more than 300 political cartoons by such masters of caricature as Thomas Nast and Joseph Keppler. Shown here is the cartoon that appeared in Harper's Weekly on November 7, 1874, in which Thomas Nast first used an elephant to depict the Republican forces.

Charles Evans Hughes, James M. Cox, Will Rogers, Al Smith, Alf Landon, Wendell Willkie, Norman Thomas, Thomas E. Dewey, Henry A. Wallace, Adlai E. Stevenson, John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon.

The exhibit includes the pictorial likeness of every candidate nominated for the presidency by a national party and hundreds of political cartoons so vigorous and vitriolic that current political insults seem like mere handshakes. The cartoons in which Thomas Nast created the Republican elephant, Democratic donkey, Tammany Tiger and Boss Tweed are part of the "Era of the Master Cartoonists" at the exhibit.

Other cartoonists through the 1864 to 1890 period are included, with such well known names as William Newman, Matt Morgan, Frank Bellew, James A. Wales, Joseph Keppler, Bernhard Gillman, Frederick Oppen, W. A. Rogers and Eugene Zimmerman.

Sewing boxes, which were early campaign souvenirs, snuff boxes, a straight razor building up "old rough and ready" Zachary Taylor, Al Smith's brown derby, Herbert Hoover's collar, a clay pipe for Henry Clay and a plethora of noisemakers including one filled with buckshot used in support of "old buck" James Buchanan. The campaign buttons provide a complete study in themselves . . . and there is the lamented Literary Digest poll which picked Landon to win over Roosevelt and thereby became a subject of ridicule.

In addition to fabrics, prints, china and pottery, there are a flock of campaign songs, with verses like the following:

Mother, may I go out swimming
Yes, my dear, go freely,
Put on your hat, your old white coat,
And vote for Horace Greeley.

Grover, Grover,
Four more years of Grover,
Out they go, in we go,
And then we'll be in clover.

There is even a bottle of booze by a man named Booz which introduced a new word into the language.

A full staff of experts has worked for months setting up the memorabilia in significant and striking order.

The potpourri of items is enormous. Among other features there are campaign flags, parasols, miniature candidate figures kicking one another, an assortment of rare Currier & Ives prints, among them one of President Lincoln without his beard and another in which the beard has been gracefully added.

It would take half a volume to describe the varied and reminiscent features in the collection valued unofficially at approximately a quarter of a million dollars.

One of the outstanding features is a Junior Voting Booth where all those under voting age will be able to register their 1960 presidential preference and then receive an "I Voted at America Goes to the Polls" button.

The exhibit is open to the public free of charge from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and until 9 p.m. Thursday evenings.

INSIDE EXHIBIT HALL - The more than 20,000 campaign mementos representing every U.S. presidential election from George Washington's day to the present, are arranged in chronological order at the "America Goes to the Polls" exhibit sponsored by The Travelers Insurance Companies. The exhibit will be open until election day, November 8.

IRCC 78 RPM Recordings 1932-1945

By AIDA FAVIA-ARTSAY
PART III

Mme. CHARLES CAHIER as Orpheus

TAMAGNO as Otello

Parts I and II of the revised and brought up to date listing of the IRCC 78 rpm recordings appeared in this department last September and January. Thus, in installments, the entire catalog of all the 78 rpm discs issued by the International Records Collectors' Club from 1932 to 1954 will be published in HOBBIES.

It is gratifying that a magazine for record collectors, "The Record News" of Canada, recognized the importance of such a compilation with the following paragraph in its September, 1959, number:

"Much welcome can be given to the project started in the September issue of HOBBIES Magazine, by Aida Favia-Artsay, of a complete listing of the IRCC reissues. Since 1944, when the last complete listing appeared in HOBBIES, IRCC continued to make 78 rpm reissues for 10 more years. Thus a complete record of their activities has become an imperative need."

VALE! KEATING COLLECTION

Wary of reports that reach me from time to time, I sought George T. Keating's confirmation of the startling news that he had disposed of his collection — the richest in the United States, possibly in the world.

In answer to my letter, Mr. Keating elaborated on the details of his unexpected decision. The collection, although sold privately, will eventually belong to the Yale Library. In fact, part of the records are already there.

The reason for this sudden turn of events was Mr. Keating's wish to reside in a place smaller than the "houses built around housing my many records," as he puts it.

However, Mr. Keating assures me of his continued interest in the hobby. "I found perhaps a thousand duplicates in albums," he writes, "and so have a fair start to a listening collection: Schorr-Wotan's Farewell, Stracciari, Hempel, Bindernagle, Galli-Curci, De Luca, Pinza, Rethberg, Farrar, Gerville-Reache, Husch, Huni-Mihaseck and other favorites. So I will always be glad to hear from you and swap gossip about the gentle art of bel canto."

Honestly, I'm dismayed; and surely many others will feel the same way. It's because the glamour of "The Keating Collection," accumulated through the years with much expenditure of time, perseverance, and money — the glamour we all knew and respected — is now gone.

Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists

Conducted by JIM WALSH

I. Hill-Billies for Victor and Others

Despite the resentment which Victor's popular pianist, arranger, and conductor, Nat Shilkret, felt because he considered Dalhart had not sufficiently recognized his part in shaping "The Prisoner's Song" into a sensational success, the overwhelming success of record No. 19427 caused Dalhart to be called on for many other Victor hill-billy recordings.

There was a lapse of six months, however, between the appearance of "The Wreck of the Old 97" and "The Prisoner's Song," in November, 1924, and Dalhart's next record of that type. Perhaps the lag was caused by the factory's efforts to catch up with the demand for the biggest selling vocal record made up to that time.

In May, 1925, Dalhart came through with "In the Baggage Coach Ahead," in which he was assisted by a male trio, and "I'll Ne'er Forget My Mother and My Home."

The supplement said: "A call has gone up all over the country for Dalhart to sing more popular songs of the old-time sort, like the 'Wreck of the Old 97.' Well, here are two more of them."

In June his version of "The Time Will Come" was coupled with "Way Down Home," by Gene Austin and Carson Robison. In July his admirers were pleased with "He Sure Can Play a Harmonica" and "Ain't You Comin' Out Tonight?" The supplement said the last was written jointly by Dalhart and Robison, although the tune was the same as "Buffalo Gals," which had been published almost 100 years before.

August brought two more Victor records by Dalhart. One appropriately coupled "The Runaway Train" and "The Chain Gang Song," and the other "A Boy's Best Friend is His Mother" and "Many, Many Years Ago."

His records, mostly titles he was also singing for Edison, Columbia, Brunswick, and many other companies, continued to pop up regularly in Victor lists. They were both the Alpha and Omega, so to speak, of the May, 1926, supplement.

On page one, under the heading

"A New Dramatic Dalhart Record," the editor said:

"Vernon Dalhart's record of 'The Prisoner's Song' is proving the best-selling vocal record in Victory history. Here is a new two-ballad record exhibiting weird crude power of appeal. 'The Governor's Pardon' is the night-vigil of a condemned man before the day set for death. To the monotonous ticking of the clock, the night-hours wear away. With morning comes not the expected death-warrant, but the Governor's pardon. 'The Engineer's Child' tells of the wife who is to hang a red lamp in the window if her sick child dies; a green, if it lives. Her husband, thundering past in the night, sees the green light and all is well."

The last record in the supplement received this mention:

"As we begin this issue with Dalhart, we conclude with him. In this new trio, (its first record), he appears as both vocalist and instrumentalist. The trio includes guitar, violin, flute, jew's harp, harmonica, and some interesting tricks. It has a waltz based on the familiar Floyd Collins ballad which Dalhart sang for us not long after this tragic event; this is coupled with a whirling swift reel, an almost ideal number for trick Charlestoneers. Dalhart sings in both numbers. (The second side, of course, was 'Better Get Out of My Way,' by the group known as Dalhart's Texas Panhandlers.")

For many months afterward, Dalhart's Victor records continued to appear with little sign of a drop in popularity. Some of his best selling numbers, in fact, were still to come. But it would serve no useful purpose to list them all. Instead, I prefer to mention several unusual discs he made during the next few years.

"The Texas Tenor" was one of the few popular singers who sometimes sang songs that were long enough to take up both sides of a 10-inch disc. One of these was his Columbia of "The Bully Song," an irresistible "coon shout" which Charles Trevathan had written for May Irwin in the 1890's. With its swinging refrain of "When I walk that levee round, round, round—" it is one of the best records Dalhart ever made. The hill-billy tune, "Bully of the Town," is a corruption of Trevathan's old-time hit.

Another two-part disc which, in my opinion, has less to recommend it is "Tired of Mother," which Victor issued in June, 1928. The words of this dirge were written by a Wesleyan Methodist minister in High Point, N. C., and the music by another preacher of the same family name.

The author of the words published it himself. It is hard to understand how Dalhart could believe a record of such a mawkish affair, occupying two full sides, could sell well enough to make it a paying proposition.

The crude lyrics tell of a paralyzed, aged woman who was lifted off a train in the belief that her daughter would come to take care of her. When the daughter didn't show up, and evinced no interest in what became of her mother, the "unwanted mother" was taken to a hospital, where she died.

The author says he "cried and prayed" over this "true story" before putting words to paper, but his internal struggles did not inspire him to write literate English. Nevertheless, the number came to Dalhart's attention (probably the author sent him a copy of the sheet music) and he recorded it, smoothing out some of the limping lines and amateurish versification.

Its sale was small and did not add to Dalhart's popularity. The record was made after his break with Carson Robison, when he was increasingly harried to find good material.

Shortly before this, the name of Adeyne Hood, who had appeared in Edison tone tests with Dalhart as far back as 1917, began to be seen in Victor and other supplements. She had taken the place of Murray Kellner as Dalhart's violinist.

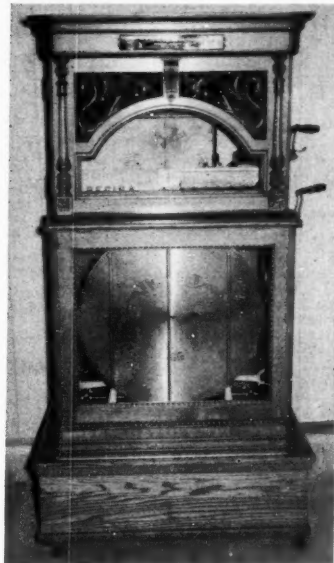

Her name was published in a Victor supplement for the first time in January, 1928, when she, Dalhart, and Robison sang and played "Sing On, Brother, Sing." (A little earlier Dalhart and Robison had sung refrains in dance records of "Shine On, Harvest Moon" and "On Mobile Bay," by the International Novelty Orchestra conducted by Nat Shilkret).

In March, the Dalhart-Robison-Hood trio had a big seller in "Oh! Susanna" coupled with Robison's beautiful composition, "When the Sun Goes Down Again," sung as a Dalhart-Robison duet. Miss Hood's incidental violin playing is exquisite.

II. Charley Case's Songs

One of the most amusing double-faced records Vernon Dalhart ever made, and apparently one of the scarest and hardest to find, is his coupling of two mock-ballads written by the brilliant Negro comedian, Charley Case. One side was called "A Warning to Boys" and the other "A Warning to Girls." This appeared under Columbia's 50 cent Velvet Tone label as by Dalhart and as a Harmony record by "Mack Allen." It is amusing that "Mack Allen" was claimed as "an exclusive Harmony artist." Charley Case was a comedian of a high strung disposition, who always played with a piece of string while on the stage to give his nervous hands something to do. He made three Victor records around 1909-10, "Father as a Scientist," "Experiences in the Show Business" and "How Mother Made the Soup."

My vaudeville comedian friend, the late Joe Laurie, Jr., told me Case

was born in Lockport, N. Y., his mother being a Negro of the Albino type and his father a white man of Irish descent. He died in the Palace Hotel on 45th Street in New York, in or about the year 1916, aged 58, and his wife, a full-blooded Negro woman, died of shock when she learned of his death.

He was cleaning a revolver when he was fatally shot. Although the shooting may have been an accident, Joe Laurie said Case was known to have brooded, and the general opinion of his associates was that the wound was intentional—a further example of the truism that the greatest comedians have their tragic side.

At any rate, Dalhart unearthed the two burlesque ballads with which Case convulsed his theater audiences, and recorded them with a mock solemnity to the accompaniment of an old-fashioned parlor organ, that is irresistibly funny. The words are worth reprinting, although to be appreciated to the fullest, they should be heard with the music. Here is the "Warning to Girls:"

"Homeward to her mother a working girl did come—
Weary with her honest toil and lighted up with rum.
Supper was not ready—she aimed a brutal blow,
When the bright baby stopped her, saying: 'Sister, don't do so!
Don't swat dear mother, girl, just 'cause she's old—
Don't mop her face with the floor!
Think how her love is a treasure of gold—
Don't push her face through the door!
Don't put the rocking chair next to her eye;
Don't bounce the lamp off her bean!
Angels are watching you up in the sky—
Don't swat dear mother—it's mean!"

RECITATION:

"There was once a poor young girl who left her country home
And came to the city to seek employment.
She had to leave her home because the wolf was at the door
And her father had fallen down and hurt his knee.
Just before she went away her sweetheart, whose name was Jack,
Said to her, 'I fear you will not be true.'
And so she had to promise him before she got on the train
That every night at 8 o'clock she would burst into tears.
She came to the city and was riding on a street car
When a man got up and offered her his seat.
She refused the offer with scorn for she saw that he wore a ring
And she did not know but that he might be a married man.
Then up came the conductor and said 'I knew you would be true!
And tore off his false whiskers—and it was Jack!
And that day she got a telegram saying that her father's knee was better,
And an aunt had died and left her
Thousand Dollars!"

And here is the "Warning to Boys:"

"There was once a poor young man who left his country home
ment.
He promised his dear mother that he'd lead the simple life
And always shun the fatal curse of drink!
He came to the city and accepted employment in a quarry,
And while there he made the acquaintance of some college men;
He little knew that they were demons, for they wore the best of clothes—
But clothes do not always make the gentleman!
One night he went out with his newfound friends to dine,
And they tried to persuade him to take a drink.
They tempted him, and tempted him, but he refused and he refused,
Till finally he took a glass of beer!
When he seen what he had done he dashed the liquor to the floor And staggered through the door with delirium tremens.
While in the grip of liquor he met a Salvation Army lassie,
And cruelly he broke her tambourine.
All she said was 'Heaven bless you!' and placed a mark upon his brow With a kick that she had learned before she was saved.
So now, kind friends, take my advice and shun the fatal curse of drink And don't go around breaking people's tambourines!"

If you happen to run across a copy of this masterpiece of satire, be sure to acquire the record. It is worth having.

III. The Break With Carson Robison

A record dealer once told me of a visit he received just before Christmas of 1927 from a lanky, somewhat intoxicated, mountaineer. The rustic gentleman bought a dozen Dalhart records, all of them dealing with train wrecks, floods, earthquakes, murders, and similar tragic happenings, and all, of course, ending with a moral admonition, such as "Don't forget that the trip is a short one from this earth to that sweet promised land!"

As his records were being wrapped, the mountaineer explained they were a Christmas present "for the old woman and the kids." Said he:

"The old woman and the kids will play these here sad pieces and cry their d--- fool heads off! With all this here mis'ry music they're sure gonna have one h--- of a Merry Christmas!"

Most of those "sad pieces" were written by Carson Robison, who soon afterward parted company with Dalhart. I have a letter which Robbie wrote to me in October, 1951, explaining why they dissolved partnership.

It boiled down to two things. Ro-

A French doll may or may not be a prized possession. It, of course, depends upon the doll itself. The famous French factories of Bru, Jumeau and Steiner turned out beautiful and interesting dolls "tops" in the world of dolls. But there were periods when some of their dolls were not any more captivating than the ordinary "doll-faced" dolls made in Germany by the millions.

By this it is not to be inferred that all German dolls were ordinary—far from it; Germany made millions of dolls which equalled the best of the French dolls. Doll trade in Germany was so prolific that the country was bound to make all grades of dolls to suit a varied clientele.

Little seems to be known about Francois Griffier, except that dolls marked with his initials are in the top bracket of French dolls. It is thought that he was connected with Jumeau, as was Belton when together, they presented dolls at the Universal Exposition at Paris in 1844.

A beautiful example of an "F. G." doll is owned by Miss Adelaide Espeland of Washington, D. C. See photographic reproduction. Note the drawn work, lace and Irish crochet in the costume. The cape and hood thrown on the tiny settee are of red flannel trimmed with old-fashioned crewel embroidery. The dress was cut down from a child's dress of the period, and the cape and hood made from a tablecloth of the same period, ca. 1887.

Few of us know what the first Jumeau dolls looked like. This was a period when, according to the best authorities, Jumeau imported heads from Germany, as did firms in other European countries. However, many of us have specimens of his delightful all-French creations made between 1860 and 1900, when the style and quality were at their peak and the proportions a delight to the eye of an artist.

As collectors know, the earliest Jumeau dolls were made to represent ladies, and there were various body types. The most rare is a wooden body made like an artist's lay figure, with joints even at the waist and ankle, so that it can be made to assume any human position.

Perhaps equally rare is the Jumeau with a kid-over-wood body and tendon joints. See photographic reproduction of Mrs. Mallon's two dolls. Another rare Jumeau is of wood with hinged joints, bisque hands, and lovely slender bisque legs and feet, toes clearly defined. A less expensive "lady" has kid shoes built on, arms of kid with stitched fingers, and muslin sawdust-stuffed body.

There was also, at one time, a most unsatisfactory sawdust-stuffed kid body with gussets at arms, buttocks and knees. These gussets were constantly being filled with sawdust, as it settled, making it impossible for the doll to either sit or stand correctly.

Early heads were stationery. But in 1862 Jumeau introduced the swivel neck on bisque shoulders for the finer trade.

Jumeau's favorite doll made her debut in the 1880's, a lovely bisque-headed "child" with composition, ball-jointed body. Some of the models had wooden upper arms and wooden upper legs.

The story of their manufacture was translated from the French by Pierre A. Durand. Later, Nina Davies published a translation from the French manuscript by J. Cusset, 1885.

The firm was started in 1843 and only a year later Jumeau won honorable mention for his dolls at an exposition in Paris. During the years that followed many honors were given Jumeau dolls, including silver and gold medals.

The letters SFBJ often appear on different makes of dolls including the Jumeau. They stand for Société Française de Fabrication de Bébes et Jouets, the name used after other firms, including German, merged with Jumeau in 1899.

Although they made some nice dolls after that time, there never was the same appeal. Even the models made in 1938 to be offered to the English Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret, although pretty dolls, were not especially distinctive.

Had they resembled the princesses they would have been more interesting. Fine portrait dolls of the princesses were made in felt; these really are collectors' items. Claire Fawcett has one of the Princess Elizabeth which really resembles the Queen as a child.

If M. Anton Bru could come to life and see the fuss collectors make over his dolls, what satisfaction it would give him! Bru took out a patent for a two-faced doll in 1867, for a turning-head doll in 1868, and a multi-faced doll in 1872.

After that time Paul Girard bought out the Bru business, but kept the name. Girard experimented with rubber dolls from 1876 to 1878. His son Eugene succeeded the father Paul. Bru dolls from the House of Girard won medals from 1878 through 1883 in Paris, Liverpool, Le Havre, Toulouse, Barcelona, and Melbourne (Australia).

See replica of the Bébé Bru label No. 15, which came on the original box containing the larger Bru doll in the picture entitled "The Misses Bru." These dolls belong to Mrs. Lester N. Hayden. (See Dec. Issue).

They are in mint condition except for a slight mend on the shoulder of the smaller doll. Wigs have been replaced by real hair patterned after the originals. This is appropriate since some of the original wigs were of real hair.

The larger Bru, 32 inches tall, has a wooden body and original clothes, a white embroidered dress, fine cotton underwear, and black shoes and socks. She is a brown-eyed beauty, found recently in the home of an elderly Paris doctor.

The smaller Bru with blue eyes is 26 inches tall, has a well-made kid body and original shoes and socks. The clothes, Mrs. Hayden says, look original, but she is not sure about them.

How dear to the heart of a child must have been the two beautiful dolls owned by Mariemae Schwarz of Cincinnati, photographs of which we will show next month. Note the closed mouth of the brunette and the slightly open mouth of the blond. The latter is characteristic of many of the Bru dolls.

Another distinctive characteristic of the Bru doll at its best is its beautifully modelled and well-proportioned hands. Heads vary in their appeal, but collectors have become so enamoured of the name Bru that they are not always discriminating. A replica of one of the finest of the Bru dolls is signed by the portrait artist Polly Mann of Colorado Springs, Colo., so it cannot be mistaken for one of the originals. See photograph.

With Bru dolls selling for as much as $400 any Bru that is reasonably priced is eagerly purchased by collectors. One of the earlier Bru dolls has a beautifully made kid body and a swivel bisque head attached to well modelled bisque shoulders, the latter inscribed, with a symbol of a circle within a circle surmounted by a crescent. The name Bru is incised vertically on the shoulder.

Mrs. J. H. Leonberger of San Francisco reports a Bru doll with the initials G. K. And between the letters, so faint that one has to use a magnifying glass to see it, is a Bru symbol, although in this instance, the crescent is underneath a single circle.

Not all dolls marked G. K. are French. One so marked, with skull and crossbones underneath, is German. What the initials stand for is at present, an unsolved mystery.

It is not generally known that Bru made "lady" as well as "child" dolls. A "lady" marked Bru looks so much like a Jumeau that were it not for the label one could not tell the difference. A whistling Bru and a brown one, owned by Mrs. Joseph Mallon of Philadelphia, are rare.

A label pasted just underneath the breast of a Bru doll and also appearing on the label of Mrs. Hayden's original box reads: Brevete S.G.D.G. While the word brevete means patent or patentee, there has been a good deal of speculation as to the meaning of the letters S.G.D.G. It has been reported to the writer that they stand for words meaning "without government guarantee," but that does not seem to make sense when used in conjunction with a word meaning patented.

It is interesting to note that not all French doll manufacturers made their own doll heads. Roulet and Decamps who made doll bodies second to none, with beautifully modelled hands and feet used unusually lovely heads marked Simo & Halbig.

AMERICAS' LARGEST SELECTION OF

BOOKS ON DOLLS

HOW TO DRESS A DOLL — Mary H. Morgan. Originally published in 1908, copies of this book have been eagerly sought by collectors. We are glad to announce a facsimile edition with all of the material from the original edition, plus new material by Clara H. Fawcett. Charmingly illustrated with bisque-head, jointed dolls, pen-and-ink drawings and pattern diagrams. $2.00.

THE GODEY LADY DOLL — Charlotte Eldridge. A charming contribution to doll making, this is also a how-to-do-it manual complete with patterns for making the dresses and miniature furniture of last century. Large format, published at $4.95, now $2.98 for a limited time.

DOLLS OF THREE CENTURIES — Eleanor St. George. Photographs of over 350 dolls. Helps collectors identify their own dolls and understand how they were manufactured. $6.50.

THE DOLLS OF YESTERDAY — Eleanor St. George. This is a book written for doll collectors. Essentially it covers dolls and doll collecting in America and Europe during the past 200 years. Large format, photos of over 450 dolls. $10.00.

ON TIME

The Rest of the Family

By SILVIO A. BEDINI

For more than a century and a half the name "Willard" has been synonymous with the finest in clock-making, and with good reason. The Willard family pursued one aspect or another of this craft for several generations and always with unsurpassed abilities.

The most important clock-makers of the family were, by general consensus, the three brothers of the first generation—Simon, Aaron and Benjamin Willard. But there were more Willards deserving of mention, although they never achieved the eminence of the others.

There was Ephraim Willard, for instance. He was the youngest of Simon's brothers. Born in 1755 in Grafton, Mass., he was the eighth son of Benjamin Willard, Sr.

Young Ephraim responded to the Lexington alarm and served in the militia under Colonel (later General) Artemas Ward. In 1777 he was established in nearby Medford as a maker of clocks and watches part of the time, apparently, in partnership with a local goldsmith named William Gowen.

By 1798 Ephraim Willard had moved to Roxbury, and in 1801, he moved again, to Boston this time. Subsequently he lived in New York City. Little is known about his later years, although he was engaged in clock-making for more than two decades of his life.

Another relatively unknown member of the family was Philander Jacob Willard. Philander and his younger brother Alexander, were sons of Jacob Willard a lineal descendant of Major Simon Willard, grandfather of the famous maker who bore his name.

Jacob Willard was a farmer by occupation in Ashburnham, Mass., where Philander was born in 1772, and Alexander in 1774. The brothers were apparently self-taught in the clock-making arts but they were closely associated with the Edwards family who were goldsmiths in the same community.

Philander made clocks in Ashburnham until 1825, when he joined his brother in Ashby. Alexander Willard was apparently endowed with great mechanical ingenuity. He also worked in his native Ashburnham until 1800 and then moved to Ashby.

There Philander joined him in about 1825. The two brothers formed a partnership which continued until Philander's death in 1840.

During his first decade in Ashby, Alexander had enjoyed a growing reputation for fine workmanship. He produced tall case, musical, church, and turret clocks, as well as timepieces (banjo clocks), wooden clocks, and clocks with musical attachments.

In addition to clocks, he made and sold surveyors' equipment including theodolites, scales, odometers, and seraphines. He also made rifles for sharpening scythes. His work found a ready market in Massachusetts as well as in Vermont and New Hampshire.

From 1812 until 1836 Alexander served as the postmaster of his little community and engaged in other local activities. One project was an enterprise to establish a turnpike, but it resulted in failure.

Philander also produced fine timepieces and his work was meticulous.

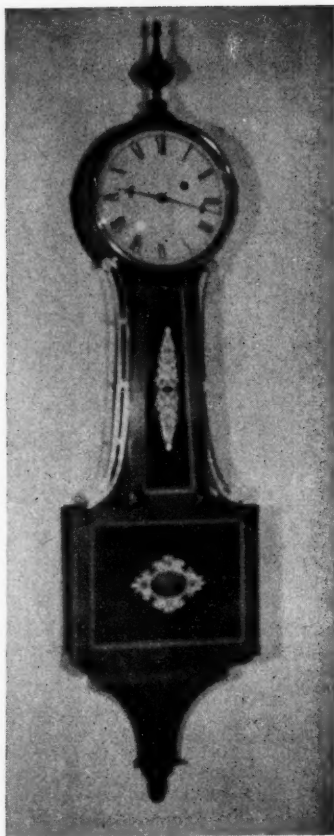

He is best remembered for his so-called "Perpetual Motion Clock," a complicated type of gravity clock on which he had labored for five years.

Especially interesting are the members of the second generation of Willard clock-makers. The great Simon Willard for instance, had several sons who became skilful in their father's art.

Prominent among these was Simon Willard, Jr., who was born in Roxbury in 1795 and who exhibited great mechanical skill from childhood. However, he never engaged in the clock-making trade.

After graduation from West Point Military Academy in 1815 he tried out several enterprises including a crockery ware business, but with little success. Next he spent two brief years in his father's clock-making establishment.

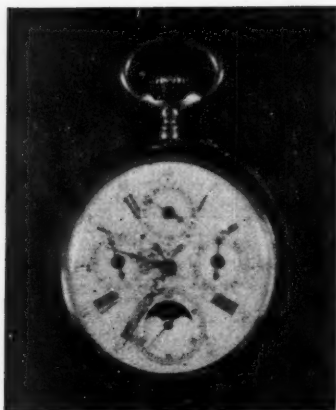

Then, exhibiting particular cour-

Problems of a Question-and-Answer Specialist on Clocks

By L. W. SLAUGHTER

Modern Swiss Calendar Watch

I find my correspondence is getting entirely out of hand. For many years I have tried to answer all letters individually but the present volume is so great I can no longer follow that policy.

It is impossible to find time to answer all the questions asked me. There is a lot of research work involved, aside from the time required to write, address, and mail individual letters.

Besides this, many of the letters are not answerable. They do not give sufficient pertinent information to permit me to find the answers.

Nearly all letters end up by asking in one way or another, "What Is It Worth?" This is asking for an appraisal of their clock. I will say more about appraisals later in this article.

I can find no other solution to this "Questions-Problem" than to pick out some of the typical questions on subjects of more or less general interest, and discuss them in this column.

Most of the letters contain too little information. A recent one was exactly the opposite. The great amount of unimportant detail was confusing.

Take the question concerning a French Victorian mantel clock. Its maker, L. Marti et Cie (and Company) does not appear in any of the lists of old makers. The clock would almost certainly date in the second half of the 19th century, rating down its value as a collector's rare item.

It is a typically ornate product of the period with an elaborately cast base, on feet. On this base the clock, in an ornate brass barrel, is at the left. Originally, but now missing, there was a statuette on the right.

What statuette? Many different statuettes were used on these clocks. I have no way of knowing which one may have been on this clock originally.

There were other questions in the letter that would have taken considerable time and research to come up with the answers. The final one was "And what is my clock worth?" As I make part of my living appraising clocks, I am unable to give away my appraisal service. It is part of my livelihood.

The next letter had to do with the selling price of "an antique clock with wooden works." Though this gentleman did not know it, clocks with wooden works were made by hundreds of different makers, and in many shapes and forms. Some of them are quite interesting and have considerable value. Others have little interest and value.

Another clock enthusiast wanted the "selling price" on an antique clock with gold face and hands, which ran perfectly, and was patented by the Ansonia Clock Company, U.S.A. New York, 1882.

As the Ansonia Clock Company was in business from 1879 to 1930 and made thousands of clocks in hundreds of different designs and types I could not picture what this clock was like. A snapshot would have helped some.

"I have a Seth Thomas—" began the next letter. The truth is, more clocks have been made with the name of Seth Thomas than any other in this country. Clocks bearing this name were made continuously from about 1809 to the present, in numerous shapes and kinds. Some of the early ones are good. The majority, however, have little value from the standpoint of rare antiques and collectors' items as of now.

"What is my Waterbury clock, made before 1890, worth?" was another question. The Waterbury Clock Company was in business from 1857 to 1944 — nearly 90 years. It made tremendous quantities of clocks. Some are very good; but the majority are not valued as collectors' rare items. I could not say what that Waterbury clock is worth without knowing more about it.

Several writers wanted to know where to get parts for their clocks. My answer to that is, there are people who are in the business of making parts for clocks who advertise regularly in HOBBIES.

One woman was asking about her C.&L.C. Ives three-tier clock. She had seen one in a museum with a decal in the center glass and wondered if those having a mirror or reverse painting on the center glass panel or other panels are restorations.

Also, she wanted to get a decal for her clock. And could I refer her to a book or magazine article showing a picture of her actual original clock. I couldn't, without hours of hunting through books and magazines myself, and maybe not then.

I should say here that many clocks of this type WERE made with a mirror in the center panel, and sometimes in the lower panel. Many others had reverse paintings on the glass panels; never decals.

Unfortunately I know of no decals that would be satisfactory for this type of clock. My questioner can, however, find people that do reverse painting on glass in the old manner, and they advertise in HOBBIES.

Questions invariably come about clocks I describe and illustrate or even advertise in HOBBIES. They say, "I have a clock just like yours, at least the case looks the same." But they cannot tell me anything about the movement. Yet they ask, "Isn't it the same clock? What can you tell me of its origin? Maker? History? And how much is my clock worth?" Think of the hours of research "origin, maker, and history" alone would require.

Or, take the beginning collector in California who picked up a "Wagon-Wall clock with a wood movement." She asks if it is American or European in origin, and wants a dial and label for it.

Even if I knew where she could get new labels I would not want to recommend them unless I was assured they would be clearly and permanently identified as reproductions, for the sake of future clock collectors. As to origin, unfortunately I have never been able to identify an American clock of this type and few of European origin.

Now about appraisals. I do appraisal service for banks, estates, attorneys, insurance companies, antique dealers, and individuals, and I am paid a fee which is commensurate with the time and effort involved.

I LIKE to help my fellow collectors — but I MUST make a living and my time is limited.

I will try to answer ONE or TWO clock questions (no appraisals) provided a stamped and self-addressed envelope accompanies the letter of inquiry.

Thanks for listening! It's a problem of questions and answers.

age, he moved to New York City with his wife and two young children, determined on learning a new trade. In New York he became apprenticed to D. Eggert to learn the chronometer and watch business.

He did well in Eggert's shop and in 1828 young Simon moved his family to Boston where he established his own shop at 9 Congress Street. His shop became a famous and important center during the decades that followed, when American shipping was in one of its most important periods.

Simon, Jr. maintained his shop at this same address for 42 years, until 1870. Probably his greatest achievement was an astronomical clock which he produced in about 1832. It was used for many years at Harvard Observatory, where it served as the standard for time-keeping throughout New England for many decades.

Another son of the famous Simon Willard was John Mears Willard.

Little is known about him since he died in his youth. However, he was considered to have been a most capable artist and it is believed that he painted clock glasses for his father's clocks.

Another son of Simon's was Benjamin Franklin Willard who was born in Roxbury in 1803 and achieved success not only as a skilful clock-maker but as an inventor. He never engaged in the clock-making trade under his own name but he worked for his father and others at various times.

In 1844 he produced an astronomical time-piece of the finest quality for which he was awarded the gold medal of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Association. Among other inventions was a revolving light for lighthouses which was used at the entrance to Boston harbor.

Undoubtedly the best known Willard of the second generation was Aaron Willard, Jr., son of Aaron, and nephew of Simon. Born in 1783 at Roxbury, he learned the clock-making trade with his father and devoted his life to the making and selling of time-pieces.

For a short time he became a partner with his brother-in-law, Spencer Nolan, in a sign-painting enterprise. He then opened his own clock-making shop and eventually became manager and finally owner of his father's flourishing factory.

After amassing a sizable fortune, he retired to an estate in Newton, Mass., where he lived until his death. In addition to the time-pieces or banjo clocks for which he is so well known, Aaron, Jr. produced tall case, gallery, and regulator clocks.

His own name appears only on time-pieces dating after 1823, the year in which he became the owner of his father's establishment. There is no certainty of the actual number of clocks which he produced, but there is a banjo clock with his name which has the serial number 3482.

A fine example of the tall case clocks produced by Aaron Willard, Jr. is illustrated here from the collection of Mrs. Helen Vaughan of Bethel, Conn. The over all height is 7 feet 11 inches with a fine mahogany case trimmed with brass.

The clock features a beautifully painted dial marked with the maker's name, and the time-piece reflects in every aspect the fine workmanship of the maker. The clock was formerly owned by descendants of Miles Standish.

The Willard clock-makers continued into a third generation. There was Zabdiel Willard son of Simon Willard, Jr. He was born in 1826, was apprenticed to his father, and eventually became his partner in 1850.

Zabdiel was responsible for the production and popularity of the Frodsham Watch. He also was an inventor of numerous processes, machines, and furnaces for the reduction of gold and silver ores. He worked as a chemist and assayer, and often acted in the capacity of a physician in mining camps in Colorado and California.

There were other Willards who made their mark in the world of Time. This includes Sylvester Willard of Bristol, who was a partner in the firm of Case, Willard & Co. in that city in 1835. Of a Thomas Willard little is known, and of his work only a single signed clock has survived. The name John Willard of Boston appeared in the city directories of 1803 and 1842.

Finally, last and probably least, there was a W. W. Willard, for in this writer's collection there is an old watch paper engraved:

"Repeating Lepine & Plain Watches repaired by

bison resented Dalhart's bringing in the charming Adelyne Hood to replace Murray Kellner while he was on vacation. Robison objected even more strongly to Dalhart's insistence that he be "cut in" for half the sheet music and record royalties from Robison's songs. This was not an uncommon practice.

Many popular artists had their names published on sheet music as part writers of songs with which they had nothing to do, in order to share in the royalties, but one can easily sympathize with Robison's attitude. I shall quote part of his letter, but it should be remembered that we have only his side of the story and Dalhart is not here to speak in his own defense:

"Dear Jim: . . . Dalhart . . . was a very difficult person to get along with. From the time I knew him until we split up, he had a continual chip on his shoulder and was suspicious of everyone. I grant that he had some tough breaks when he first got to New York from Texas, but who doesn't? I landed in New York with $3.65 in the one good pocket of my only suit and for a long time I ate 35 cent spaghetti dinners on Eighth Avenue. But even after things really began to break for Dal he couldn't get over his bitterness at life. . . . When Dal and I split in 1928 I know he was worth between $150,000 and $200,000, and he told me one time that he was going to show them how to make some real money on the stock exchange—not knowing a thing about it, of course. . . .

"When we first got together in 1924 . . . he compelled me to give him one-third of the royalties I received on any song that he recorded, even if he only recorded it on one label. Then he finally tried to make me give him 50 per cent and that was the pay-off. When we split, practically every recording company . . . got in touch with me and offered to help me find a voice to replace him. In fact, Nat Shilkret offered to spend $5,000 if necessary. . . .

"About Miss Hood, I knew practically nothing about her until he suddenly brought her to New York from Alabama to record with us, and he chose the time to bring her when I was out West on a vacation. I had worked for a long time with an excellent violinist, teaching him hill-billy style of 'fiddlin' and he had gotten really outstanding in this type of work and did all our dates with us. . . . Naturally he felt that he was a part of the combination. Dalhart said nothing to him about changing and nothing to me, and when I got back and found Miss Hood there the first thing I asked Dal was if he had told the old fiddler about it. His reply was, 'Why do I have to tell him anything?' . . . Miss Hood was a charming person, but that actually was the beginning of the end with him and me. Without patting myself on the back, he lasted just about a year after we split, due mainly to the lack of proper material to record. I had made a study of his ability and wrote accordingly and we had some terrific sellers together, but he didn't have one outstanding record after we split.

"The story of 'The Prisoner's Song' is a long one. . . . Guy Massey . . . sang the song continually while he was visiting Dalhart in New York and When Dal and I were called by Victor to record 'Wreck of the Old 97,' Mr. (Eddie) King of Victor asked us if we had anything to put on the back of it. Dal told him about 'The Prisoner's Song,' which at that time was not even named, and told Mr. King there would be no royalty, as the song was public domain, as far as he knew. We recorded it and shortly afterwards Dal copyrighted the song in his name and stuck Victor for royalties. As far as I can learn, he collected from Shapiro-Bernstein approximately $85,000, which represented 95 per cent of all royalties. Guy Massey got five per cent and died in San Antonio a few years later practically penniless. In later years when Dal was doing everything he could to get back on records, he was guest star on 'We, the People,' and I cringed when I heard him tell how he went home one night and composed 'The Prisoner's Song.' The man never composed a note of anything in his life. . . ."

And that is the late Carson Robison's version of his break-up with Dalhart. I dislike to give only one side of a controversy, but since Dalhart had died three years before this letter was written there was no way of quoting him in rebuttal.

Robison obtained Frank Luther as his singing partner (they made Victor records for a time under the names of Bud and Joe Billings) and went on to many other recording successes. In the 1930's he and his radio troupe known as Carson Robison and His Buckaroos went to England, were a big success on the stage, and made a large number of records.

In justice to Adelyne Hood, I should register my opinion that she was an excellent violinist, although certainly not a fiddler of the robust hill-billy style, and she also had a charming voice, which added much to many of Dalhart's records. Their Columbia duet of "The Frog Song," written by Thomas P. Westendorf, who composed "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen," is captivating.

She was also a brilliant comedienne, who (thanks perhaps to her Alabama background) could impersonate a Negro woman to the life, as her 1930 Columbia records of "Madam Queen" and "He's On the Chain Gang Now" reveal. (Dalhart takes the part of a police court judge in the latter.)

The last I heard of Miss Hood was 10 years or more ago when she was broadcasting as "Aunt Jane" each day from a Pittsburgh radio station. I have always admired her and hope she is still alive and happy.

IV. Dalhart in Decline

Judging by Robison's remarks about Dalhart's desire to show other people how to play the stock market, he probably invested heavily, and, like thousands of other unwary citizens, was virtually wiped out in the October, 1929, crash. It is difficult otherwise to account for his descent into comparative poverty.

Another hard blow for him was the shrinking of the record buying public to negligible proportions after 1929. If Robison had still been working with Dalhart the depression would have curtailed his sales, especially since hill-billy records were mostly bought by people of low incomes. Too, he and Miss Hood now had to battle the competition of more authentic hill-billy recorders such as Jimmy Rodgers, the Carter Family, and Riley Puckett.

Edison's departure from the record business was another blow. Dalhart kept plugging away, however, and made ingenious efforts to freshen the appeal of his records by introducing new effects, a jug band among them. Some of his last Victor and Columbia records, such as "Eleven More Months and Ten More Days" and "Low Bridge, Everybody Down!" would have been big sellers a few years before, but after the depression set in few "country cousins" felt they could spare 75 cents for such a luxury as a phonograph record.

Dalhart's name ceased to appear in both the Victor and Columbia supplements at about the same time in 1930. Occasionally, it might be seen in a Banner or some other cheap record list, but after 1931 he realized he was through.

THE IRISH THRUSH

Back before World War I two baseball men began a famous double life. They spent their winters in vaudeville, their summers with the great American game.

Meet them! Marty McHale, a Yankee pitcher who became vaudeville's Irish Thrush or The Baseball Caruso. And Mike Donlin, Giant star with a clever tongue.

Their billing "Right Off The Bat" was in Keith's Palace Theatre on Broadway in November, 1914. In those days baseball salaries were still "modest."

Sometime before that Donlin had married Mabel Hite, a vaudeville star, and had left baseball to go on the circuit with his wife. He returned to baseball when she died in 1912.

But Marty McHale's story was different. He had sung his way through college at nickel movies, had been a star athlete at Tilton Academy and the University of Maine, and had joined the Red Sox after graduation.

Soon he, with three other players—Buck O'Brien, Hugh Bradley and Bill Lyon, delighted the townspeople by singing of evenings around their hotels when the Red Sox were on the road. Then, in B. F. Keith's Boston office John F. Royal fixed up vaudeville bookings for the "Red Sox Quartette."

When the "Quartette" broke up, Marty McHale went the circuit alone for a couple of years singing "When You're a Long, Long Way From Home," "Mother Machree," and "Forever is a Long Long Time." Then he joined up with Donlan. The war and Marty's stint in the Air Force put a stop to that.

All told, Marty McHale was in vaudeville 10 years. He did a turn as a sports writer on a New York paper, became an expert golfer, married Margaret Dunstan, daughter of a famous restaurateur, produced a successful film "Baseball Review," and built the M. J. McHale Company, Investment Securities.

He has two sons, one in Prep school at Woonsocket, the other at the University of Maine. He is president of his company, keeps track of his old friends, and is a favorite with all who know him.

But today he loves to dig out the big envelopes of old clippings and the scrap books, and mull over the time when "it wasn't all made." When, for that fleeting minute, on the old Keith-Orpheum Circuit, the Irish Thrush sang youth back into the hearts of his vaudeville audience, and dreams back into their eyes.

An old friend of HOBBIES Magazine, Clarence Edward Heller, "Bard of Brooklyn," and also HOBBIES Magazine, dug up this interesting bit of history about his friends. No doubt other readers will recall the joys they gave in days not so long past.

Royal "Trick" Elephant Bank

By F. H. GRIFFITH

An interesting group of mechanical banks is comprised of elephants of different types and sizes performing a variety of tricks involving the use of coins in their action. The appropriately named Royal "Trick" Elephant Bank, one of the most unusual in the group, is our choice as No. 89 in the numerical classification of mechanical banks. The name is quite appropriate since the elephant is most certainly decorated in a lavish royal manner and he does do a neat trick with a coin.

Definite background information on the bank, as to the origin, maker, time of manufacture, and so on, is sadly lacking. There are no markings, dates, numbers, or anything else on the bank itself that would help to identify it. No catalogs of any type known to the writer either picture or describe the bank for sale. There are some things, however, concerning the bank that we can be reasonably sure of. For one thing there is no question but that it is of foreign make and most probably of German manufacture. It has characteristics in common with the Cross Legged Minstrel for example, and this is a known foreign product. Also the Royal "Trick" Elephant Bank is made of tin, similar to some of the other known imported mechanical banks. The locking tin coin trap in the base is identical to several of the German made banks. Other factors, all indicative of the same foreign source, have to do with the colors of the bank, and the way it is made. As to the period of the bank there is not much to go on, but most likely it dates around 1890 to 1910.

The bank shown is in fine original condition and is in the extensive collection of John D. Meyer. On the occasion of a recent visit with Mr. Meyer the writer had the pleasure of examining several mechanical banks in his collection, and in particular the bank now under discussion, and the Snake And Frog In Pond. Both of these banks are quite unique and rather difficult to describe unless seen first hand. Mr. Meyer's Royal "Trick" Elephant Bank was formerly in the collection of the late James C. Jones and it was one of Mr. Jones' favorite banks. He was particularly fond of elephants and in addition to his collection of mechanical banks he also had quite a collection of elephants in ivory, bronze, and other materials. Naturally any mechanical bank that had to do with an elephant had a particular appeal to him.

The bank, as stated above, is very ornately decorated. The base is red; and the coin holder, and the section between the legs of the elephant have representations of green foliage. The elephant itself is a tan and green color with shading and blending of the two colors. There is a red blanket or robe covering the elephant's body. This has gold fringe around the edges and red tassels hanging down each of the legs. In addition there is blue and gold bordering and other decorations on the robe. There is a striped blue and red hood over the head of the elephant and this has red tassels hanging over the front of the ears and down the front of the trunk. All lettering on the bank is in black. On each side of the red base the following verse appears:

"Put a coin in the slot then you'll see something funny.
Press my tail hard and I'll swallow the money."

On the front of the red base appears the name "Royal

"Trick" Elephant Bank." The following wording appears on each side of the base just under the coin holder, "Place Coin Here," and there is an arrow pointing up to the coin holder. The verse refers to this section as having a slot, which it does, however, in normal reference to a coin slot an entrance for the coin is indicated. In the case of this bank the slot is actually a resting place for the coin, or a coin holder, since the coin does not enter the bank through this slot.

The operation and mechanism of the bank is fast and efficient. A coin is first placed in the slot as directed and then the tail is pressed. In so doing a V-shaped piece in the slot on which the coin rests snaps up and throws the coin rapidly upward. At the same time the elephant's head and trunk bend down so that the coin goes into the mouth with perfect precision. The action of the coin is actually so fast that it seems to disappear and it is necessary to watch closely in order to see the coin enter the mouth. Releasing the tail automatically returns the working parts to the position shown in the picture.

The Royal "Trick" Elephant Bank is an intriguing mechanical bank and it offers a good challenge to the collector since only a few specimens of the bank have turned up to date.

MUSEUMS

Adds Country Store

Outside: Front of country store. Note scales, street light, hitching posts, etc.

The Milan Historical Museum, which has become such a popular attraction in the past several years, along with the Edison birthplace, has opened a new feature of interest, a typical country store. It is equipped with the many things, including the merchandise, that one associates with such a store.

The incentive to establish a genuine country store was sparked by Arthur Klee of Norwalk. Long associated with the collection, sale, and repair of antiques, Mr. Klee offered for sale to the museum his collection of country store items, which he had accumulated over the years and set up in his garage workshop.

Robert Mowry, chairman of the museum board, now a resident of Chicago but formerly a Milanite, suggested that the museum purchase Mr. Klee's collection. This was done in October, 1959.

The Milan Library Board, during the late winter and the spring of 1960 had an old-fashioned store building, 18 feet by 30 feet, as accurate in detail as possible erected behind the museum. The interior was finished with the help of a generous donation from Mr. Mowry.

The store has many items one would have found common during the period from 1840 to 1900. In the customary place is a big, black pot-bellied stove, a gift of George Drake. A sign on it asks the customers to use the "Spit Box" rather than the stove or floor as a target.

Light fixtures, which once graced the shoe store owned by Louis Dorr's father hang from the ceiling. A post office copied from one at Shinrock, Ohio, is in the rear.

On the shelves are toys, dishes, oil lamps, hats, shoes, and household goods of all sorts. There are also canned and staple groceries and a variety of candy, collected by Mr. Klee and added to by others.

In front of the store is an old oil street light discovered in the barn of the Rodman home in Milan. The windows of the store, many-paned as they were in the early days, are full of things to entice customers, such as the latest in hats, circa 1870. A large scale stands outside to weigh grain and other heavy merchandise.

Arrangement of the displays was done by Mrs. Wade Roberts, curator of the museum, and Mrs. Louis Dorr, vice-chairman of the museum administrative committee. This new addition certainly will be of interest to those who have been through this fine Milan museum and will be an added reason for those who have not visited it to do so. The store, which was opened for viewers July 16th, is already attracting much attention.

Inside: Dry goods side looking toward front window. Note ribbon counter, bonnets, yard goods, toys.

Inside: See groceries, furnishings, drugs.

Metal Sculpture of Greater India

PART III

By GRACE KALER

The highest ideals in the art of every country have centered around the common conception of the Divinity. The Indian conception of divine beauty provides the means of understanding all Indian aesthetic thought, and shows clearly the inherent difference between Eastern and Western ideals.

Indian art is fundamentally idealistic, mystic, and symbolic-inspired by Indian nature, Indian philosophy, and religious teaching. The artist serves as both priest and poet.

In this respect, the art of India is closely related to the Gothic art of Europe. In fact, Gothic art is the Eastern awareness expressing itself under Western influence.

Every character in Indian figure art was most scrupulously symbolized. The qualities which distinguish a god from a demon—the wise from the ignorant—were represented by specific symbols which identified each figure. In precise proper sculptural forms, the Indian accomplishment is practically unequalled.

One who is not familiar with Indian mythology and literature may easily be confused when confronted with many-headed and multi-armed figures, equipped with their various attributes. Apart from religious significance, the multiplicity of heads and arms represents the magnitude of the power which these gods and demons were supposed to possess.

Sculptures were considered essential to certain structures and Indian architecture often incorporated animal and human figures as an essential part of monasteries, temples, monumental gateways, and palaces. The metal figures were usually portable, for the purpose of carrying in ceremonial processions.

Because these images had a close connection to the niches in which they were placed, the forms were often contorted to harmonize with the architecture. However the exaggerated attitudes were so carefully balanced—and the patterns were so complete—that the figures never appeared unnatural or grotesque.

The materials and methods used in sculpture have limitations in effecting movements such as flying through the air or floating on water. Attempts to manifest motion in stone or metal do not ordinarily produce a very successful effect of continuous movements, even when outstretched wings or fins are attached to the figures.

The sculptors of India, however, achieved success in giving the impression that the forms representing heavenly dancers and aquatic divinities were flying and floating without giving them wings or fins. The figures of Gandharvas (heavenly musicians-godlings) and Apsaras (heavenly damsels) can clearly be seen as gliding along in the sky. Dancing figures, with the rhythmic swing of their arms, robes, and ornaments, transmit endless vibrant motion—even through the medium of stone and metal.

There are almost no portrait sculptures in Indian figure art. The many metal images of royal personages and donors are not portraits in the strict sense of the word. They display authentic contemporary attire and other details but their facial features show the common racial types rather than individualized likenesses.

Various detailed statements exist on image-making. Most of them were written during and after the Gupta period (320-600 A.D.)—a period that produced some of the greatest religious sculptures, with a classic quality as an outstanding characteristic. The rules and regulations established by these explanatory treatises were strictly followed by the artists of later periods.

Generally speaking, the fundamentals of Gupta art theory have remained unchanged in India to the present time. South Indian sculptures, though differing considerably in style and workmanship from the northern types followed the basic ideals and religious codes of the North in the attitudes and gestures of the images.

The figures of the post-Gupta period usually show slender, trim bodies; however, fleshy figures were created to represent certain characters. In one of the ancient Indian art treatises it is stated: "An emaciated image brings famine, a stout figure spells sickness for all, while one that is well proportioned, without displaying any bones, muscles or veins, will always enhance one's prosperity."

These regulations resulted in the creation of a conventional human form which was commonly used in images. Characters which were neither gods nor goddesses were not restricted to the requirements of the religious rulings.

An example of this type of metal sculpture shown here is the 15th century Hindu man riding an elephant. A glossy black patina covers the bronze of both figures, which are further enhanced by traces of bright red lac.

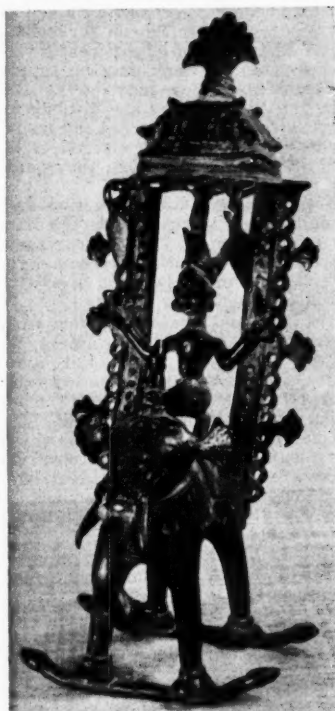

Devices for dwarfing and enlarging figures were used in Indian sculpture to denote the less forceful and the more powerful gods and demons. Comparative measurements were established for the images in their various aspects.

The images and symbols in Indian metal sculpture will not appear so complex if the religious and philosophical ideas they portray are understood. The image of Buddha is not merely a figure of a yogi meditating—it symbolizes the divine wisdom gained by the Buddha in his austerity and meditation. Whether standing or sitting, a representation of this religious leader portrays perpetual bliss and eternal poise—surrounded by chaos.

The most outstanding feature of Indian imagery is the magnificent Studio Buttons

By DOROTHY FOSTER BROWN

Conducted By DOROTHY FOSTER BROWN

This is the name currently given to buttons which are "made for collectors." They may be of different styles and substances; they may be simple or elaborate; they may be as far apart in type as they are in place of origin; but if they are hand-made, or otherwise especially created to be sold or given to collectors, they qualify as Studio buttons.

Most of them are attractive and some are real works of art. The buttons illustrated while not representative of every possible type, are characteristic examples of this ever-widening classification.

No. 1. Black walnut button with metal shank. Made by Albert L. Bower of Dayton Ohio. For some years, Mr. Bower has been winning prizes with his buttons made from black walnuts and butternuts. The former may have one, two, or three kernels, although the first two variations are rare. Admittedly, Nut buttons are not practical for "buttoning," but they are decorative on clothing, or in collections.

No. 2. Shells on pearl. The pink shell flower with bud and green leaves is cemented to a flat, white pearl button. The arrangement and combination of tiny shells is an art in itself. And when good taste is wedded to technical skill, Shell buttons and jewelry have a unique and genuine charm.

No. 3. Tapa cloth. Mrs. Minnie J. Stearns of Massachusetts, a shut-in collector, secured some of this exotic material, from which she had covered buttons made to give to friends. Tapa cloth is made from the soft inner bark of certain trees native to the South Sea Islands. Its manufacture is complicated and laborious,* and may soon become a lost art. The design on the button shown is rendered in soft shades of brown, c. 1947. Pad back.

No. 4. Modern Paperweight button, made by Frank X. Weinman, c. 1955. The multicolored swirl effect is enhanced with goldstone.

No. 5. "Jasperware" button, made and initialed by Mrs. Marie LaBarre Bennett of Washington. Mrs. Bennett's beautiful ceramic buttons, made "in the manner of Wedgwood," depict famous people classical and historic scenes, etc. Backgrounds are of pink, yellow, mauve, and brown as well as the more conventional blue, green and black. The button shown has a blue ground and self-shank, 1959. Reverse: "M B."

No. 6. "The Serpent in the Garden of Eden". A pearl button from "the Holy Land." These beautifully carved pearl buttons, most of which portray biblical subjects or symbols, are made by native craftsmen. The workmanship is superb, and the filigree designs especially are finely conceived and executed. Applied metal shank, 1959.

No. 7. "Britannia". A "D.F.B. original button painted in watercolor on plaster of Paris, and glazed but not fired. With my father's help—he made the buttons themselves—I have decorated more than 100 buttons of this type, to give to friends. Metal shank. Reverse: "D.F.B. - No. 75 - 1956."

No. 8. Roses Hand-painted on china by H. F. Meyer, c. 1942. This is an exquisite example of the finest type of china painting. Convex, with gold border, self-shank. Reverse: "H.F.M. - '42."

No. 9. Another ceramic button made by George E. Adams. This plaster model was cast from a well-known metal button. Rendered in brown with gilt highlights, it is more effective than it was in the original brass. Metal shank, c. 1947. Reverse: "47."

No. 10. White shell flower and leaves, embellished with silver, and mounted on flat white plastic. The button came on a card with the neatly printed legend "Originals by Olga." But who and where Olga is or was, I have no idea. Applied plastic shank, c. 1958.

No. 11. Polished wooden button of California redwood and Washington holly; convex, with metal shank. Made for Mrs. J. O'Brien, of Seattle. While many types of wooden buttons may be found in the "Studio" category, this and similar buttons made of redwood burl and Oregon myrtle are among the aristocrats of their kind.

Then there are parquetry buttons, carved buttons, stained and painted buttons; buttons cut out in the shapes of states or animals; buttons made from historic buildings or trees. Wood lends itself to many types of decoration, but is most individual when unadorned.

Other Studio buttons are made from gemstones, horn, ivory (from India), walrus ivory (from Alaska), silver (from Bethlehem), and other metals (from Europe). Many are interesting souvenirs from distant countries or historic spots; many are outstanding for fine design and skilful workmanship.

The fact that they are made to sell does not detract from their charm; nor need they be lacking in friendly associations just because they were intended for collectors, from the start. In many hobbies, items have been purposely made to appeal to collectors and to enlarge their collections.

Even stamps are known to have been issued for this purpose, rather than for necessary postal requirements! And while such items are sometimes considered less desirable, collector-wise, than "genuine" items—that is, articles made primarily for non-collector use—they can be pleasant additions to any collection.

Studio buttons are usually interesting. If they are beautiful as well, they need no other excuse for being.

I just want to say, in conclusion, that even good things can be overdone. Studio buttons, however attractive, cannot be expected to take the place of the "genuine" variety.

Also, Studio buttons must be "honest"—they must not pretend to be other than they are. They should be signed and dated; then there will be no opportunity for mistakes or for any false pretenses.

In hobbies, as in everything else, "Honesty is the best policy"—or should be!

array of sculptures produced under the rigorous suppression of self-interpretation.

From the time when the priests, and other religious officials, prescribed the type of figures and attributes to be represented, the sculptors were restricted to interpreting only those defined descriptions of images—without omitting or changing any detail of the prescribed pattern. Postures could be standing, sitting, or reclining.

It seems reasonable to believe that many of the outstanding works were collective efforts guided by one master. Splendid examples indicate that a group of artists working on the same figure had such similar ideas that the resulting effect appeared to be the work of one sculptor.

Great similarity is shown here in the two gilt bronze figures of Buddha. Although these figures were cast in Tibet, their hair-dress is in the style of Siam.

Indian art—more subtle and profound than the classic art of Europe—requires a higher degree of artistic understanding. A group of writers have discussed the true substance of Indian art and the problems that confront the Westerner who wants to see this art with intelligence and understanding.

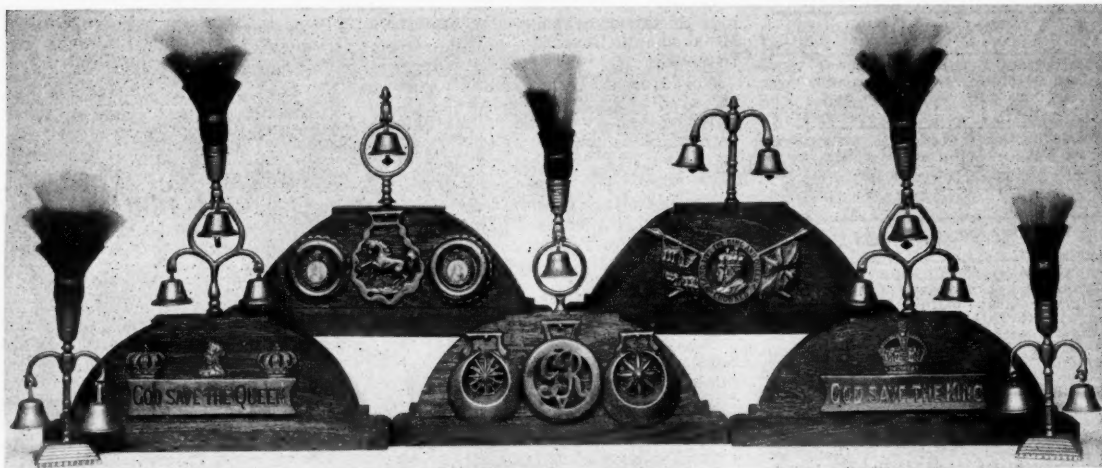

These writers have indicated that the mind of the 20th century Occidental is not prepared, without some preliminary direction, to get a true impression of the mind of the fifth or 10th century Buddhist or Hindu.

To form a true estimate of the art of any country, one must consider—not what that art has borrowed—but what it has given to the world. From this viewpoint, Indian art should be placed among the greatest of the great schools—Asian and European.

Part IV of Metal Sculpture of Greater India will appear in the December issue.

BELLS

LOIS E. SPRINGER

Horse bells and brasses that once graced the harnesses of the horses of English Royalty and are now among the bell treasures of Mr. and Mrs. Albert DuBois.

Collectors familiar with the S.S. Sarna bells of India will be interested to learn that the originator of these bells is the subject of an autobiography "Bells of Sarna," slated for publication next year.

A further news release describes Mr. Sarna's Bell Museum to be opened in 1963, at Sarasota, Fla. It will rise on an acre site, and when opened, will feature the owner's private collection of 10,000 bells.

The ancient Chinese delight in bells is well attested to in a delightful little story of the emperor who ordered his servants to attach a tiny golden bell to each flower in his palace garden. When the wind blew, there was a trembling, ringing sound, lovely beyond words.

The choice of tunes played by mechanical chimes is always of interest, for there is usually a story behind the choice. The selections heard on the chimes of St. Petersburg's First Federal Savings Building are strictly attuned to the weather.

"Oh, What a Beautiful Morning" is used only in the morning when the weather indication is fair. If the prospect is for rain, the tune is "Stormy Weather." If cold weather is in prospect, the tune played is "Button Up Your Overcoat." A continued dry spell calls for "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More."

The 15th annual meeting of the American Bell Association was a gala three-day occasion, sponsored by the Colorado chapter June 23, 24, and 25. Headquarters for the 150 members present were at Denver's new luxury motel, The Continental Denver.

Those attending were well briefed on historic bells of Colorado and the West. They also enjoyed a scenic tour, during which Denver's oldest and newest bells were inspected.

Climax of the affair was a visit to the Museum of Bells belonging to Winston Jones. Members were also privileged to purchase antique bells from the well-known Weinmann collection.

Miss Ruth Anderson, noted California collector, last Spring enjoyed a bit of "collector's luck" when she found three Chinese Mandarin hat button bells all in one shop.

Inside the Gene Stratton Porter Memorial

PART II

By LUCETTA A. JOHNSON

We drove inside the Gene Stratton Porter Memorial and parked. We could approach the cabin only by taking a winding trail through the woods. This trail extended about one-half mile through shrubs and trees. Many of these were labeled for easy identification.

The large size of many of the trees impressed us and we thought of Mrs. Porter's love and concern for these giant trees. She had spent so much of her time caring for them so they could be preserved for future generations. Our children were in one of those future generations she had been planning for.

Soon the cabin came into view. The "Cabin in Wildflower Woods" is two stories high and built of Wisconsin cedar logs. To the front, towards the lake, is a large stone porch. It had such a variety of stones it delighted us all as we are "rock hounds" as well as book and general collectors.

Above this open porch is a closed-in porch with windows all around. It seemed familiar to us because Mrs. Porter speaks of it in her book, "Tales You Won't Believe." She considered it one of her best vantage points for watching and studying the lives of the wild. Above the cabin rose a tall chimney of stones reaching high into the sky.

We looked about the outside of the home and noticed the beautiful gardens behind the cabin. The gardens were planted up the side of a hill and we were told that attempts were being made to keep flowers growing there like Mrs. Porter had when she was alive.

We remembered that Mrs. Porter had added to the wild flowers she found there all sorts of wild flowers from many states and countries. These were sent to her by people when they heard of her wild flower projects. One of her most treasured gifts were wild white strawberries given to her by Lew Wallace, author of "Ben Hur."

We went around to the front and entered "The Cabin in Wildflower Woods" at last. It had been an ambition on my Mother's part for over 30 years. It was not a disappointment.

The front hall is paneled in native wild cherry. To the right is a wild cherry staircase which goes to the second floor. Cases line the wall with mementos of Mr. and Mrs. Porter's trips.

Advancing straight ahead we entered the dining-room. It is a cheerful room, also paneled in wild cherry. Flowers were about the room and in one corner a large brick fireplace.

We went into both the study and the living room. By far the most remarkable attraction in each of these rooms is the fireplace.

In the living-room the fireplace is made up of many kinds of large stones from many places, and imbedded between these stones are Aztec relics collected by Mr. Porter.

In the study is a fireplace made of large stones called by the lay people "pudding stone." It is white with smaller stones of red and black imbedded in it.

We bought a piece of it in the conservatory room to take with us as a souvenir. The conservatory had been used by Mrs. Porter to start plants until they were established enough to plant outside.

We asked to see some of her books. They had very few of her original books there. They told us most of the ones they have are kept at Limberlost Cabin at Geneva. They had many new reprints of her novels resting on the table in the study and in the book-cases about the room.

We decided then and there that very soon we would have to visit this first cabin, too. We wanted to see some of the sites of those first 10 books she wrote while she lived at Geneva.

Listed below are the works of Gene Stratton Porter as given in a pamphlet put out by the Indiana Department of Conservation, Division of State Parks:

The Song of the Cardinal
At the Foot of the Rainbow Freckles
A Girl of the Limerlost
The Harvester
Laddie
Michael O'Halloran
A Daughter of the Land
Her Father's Daughter
The White Flag
The Keeper of the Bees
Music of the Wild Birds of the Bible
Moths of the Limerlost
Homing with the Birds
Tales You Won't Believe Morning Face
Let Us Highly Resolve
Wings
The Magic Garden

What I Have Done With Birds.

Also poetry: The Fire Bird. And, Jesus of the Emerald.

Gene Stratton Porter was still actively writing when her untimely death occurred in 1924. Her automobile was struck by a streetcar on December 6. She was only 61 years old.

"STUMP SPEAKING"

(See Cover)

"There comes Crockett," cried one. 'Let us hear the Colonel,' cried another, and so I mounted the stump that had been cut down for the occasion, and began to bushwhack in the most approved style.

"I had not been up long before there was such an uproar in the crowd that I could not hear my own voice, and some of my constituents let me know that they could not listen to me on such a dry subject as the welfare of the nation until they had something to drink and that I must treat them. Accordingly I jumped down from the rostrum and led the way to the shantee, followed by my constituents shouting, 'Huzza for Crockett,' and 'Crockett for ever!'"

This gives us some idea of "Stump Speaking" on the Tennessee frontier region in the early 1800's when David Crockett was a candidate for the U.S. Congress from the State of Tennessee. The painting "Stump Speaking" was completed in 1854 and was not too far removed in time from the conditions prevailing in Crockett's time.

"Politicking" in the grand manner is a custom peculiar to America. Now the season is here again so it seemed most appropriate to use a scene from early Americana on the cover of this most important month, politically speaking. "Stump Speaking" is still important today on the American scene, as witness the fact that the two presidential candidates from the two major parties plan to cover every state in the Union giving speeches and shaking hands with the people, meeting the public face to face. They are doing this in spite of the fact that radio and television and all the news media can reach millions of people at the time or shortly after something of importance has occurred. While their language probably is more refined and restrained than it was in frontier days, the same general method is used, that is, to show what a regular fellow the candidate speaking is, and what a misguided, misinformed, unqualified candidate his opponent is. The principal difference is that in the campaigns of yesteryear the candidates fought with their bare fists. Today they fight with gloves on.

Early in the year of 1854, George Caleb Bingham completed his painting "Stump Speaking." In the spring of that year he sold his copyright to Goupil & Company, engravers and printmakers in Paris, France. The cover photo has been made from the Goupil print which is owned by the Chicago Historical Society. We are grateful for their permission in here-with reproducing the print. The original painting is owned by The Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis, who also have given their consent to have the picture reproduced in this issue.

OBITUARY

"MOTHER TUSCH"

Mary E. Tusch, guardian angel to thousands of American airmen who knew her as "Mother Tusch," is dead, according to a news story in the San Francisco Chronicle.

Mrs. Tusch, whose Berkeley home was known through two World Wars as "The Hangar" and whose "boys" were this country's aeronautical great, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Paul E. Garber, Washington, D. C.

The 85-year-old Mrs. Tusch had thousands of souvenirs and mementos of aviators' exploits for which she once turned down an offer of $50,000. She presented the collection to the Smithsonian Institution's National Air Museum, where her son-in-law, Garber, is head curator.

Mrs. Tusch opened her home to airmen, fed them, gave them Bibles and during the influenza epidemic of 1918 organized a Mother's Club to nurse them.

In the years that followed she befriended thousands more, including the late General Billy Mitchell, Charles A. Lindbergh, Eddie Rickenbacker, Amelia Earhart, and Jimmie Doolittle.

The rooms of her home began to bulge with relics sent by her "boys"—a strut from the Wright Brothers plane; a sealskin cap worn by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd; the propeller from the seaplane in which Glenn L. Martin made the first long over-water flight.

Described as a one-woman USO, Mrs. Tusch continued her acts of kindness throughout World War II.

HELEN BARNDT

Helen Barndt, widely known dealer of antiques, died at her home in Wauwatosa, Wis., in early September. Mrs. Barndt will be remembered as an exhibitor at the Chicago Antiques Exposition and other midwest shows over a period of several years.

MOTHER LARKE

Word has come to HOBBIES Staff through Mrs. John R. Wright of California, of the passing of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Larke Blodgett, May 26, 1960. She was almost 90.

Mother Larke, as she was known, was for many years, owner of the Miniature Palace at Cliff House, San Francisco. Collectors of Miniaturia the world over were among her friends.

According to Mrs. Wright, Mother Larke's Miniature Palace will continue to operate at Cliff House so the priceless collection will continue to be available to visitors and collectors.

HENRY J. DWILLARD

Henry J. Dwillard of Kalamazoo, Mich., one of the foremost collectors and students of old steins, died on September 5 of a sudden heart attack. He had been a consistent advertiser in HOBBIES for almost 25 years.

OLD GLASS & CHINA

AMERICAN BOTTLES

The Carrie Nation Bottle

By ALBERT CHRISTIAN REVI

Because of the appellation given to this bottle by collectors, it has always been considered at least contemporary with that famous disciple of prohibition, Carrie Nation. The patent papers, dated July 15, 1930, reveal its rather late production.

The terms of the patent, issued to Ben H. Wilson of Toledo, Ohio, give exclusive right to this design to the patentee for a period of 14 years: July 15, 1930 to July 15, 1944.

The bottle stands just slightly under nine inches tall. It depicts a lady wearing a high-crowned hat and carrying a large purse and long-handled umbrella.

The representation could be that of Carrie Nation, however, the patent specifications give no such indication. The top is plain, indicating that a cork was the only means for closing the bottle. So far it has been found in clear crystal glass only.

The similarities between the "Carrie Nation," "Mr. Pickwick," and one version of the "George Washington" bottles gives rise to the conclusion that perhaps they were all manufactured by the same company, or at least were designed by the same artist, but this is not true.

We believe this to be the first positive information given to collectors about this popular bottle.

VICTORIAN GLASS HANDBOOK—Containing all illustrations in the large volume plus index. Carry it with you for identification purposes. $3.00

ANTIQUE FAKES & REPRODUCTIONS—Illustrating the difficult-to-tell fakes of the Twenties, Thirties and Forties which fool so many dealers and collectors today. These clever fakes should not be confused with Department Store Reproductions which any amateur can recognize. You may save its cost on your next purchase. 166 plates, 317 pages. $7.50

NINETEENTH CENTURY ART GLASS—Covering the collectible glass of the later Victorian era—Tiffany, Amberina, Burmese, Peach-blow, Nicholas Lutz, Cameo, Pomona, Satin Guass and much more. $4.00

PRICE GUIDE TO PATTERN GLASS—More than 7,000 items in 280 patterns of early American pressed glass are priced with a line drawing to identify each pattern. $3.95

CURRENT VALUES OF ANTIQUE GLASS—A reference book for price averages of Victorian, Sandwich and Art Glass with line drawings. $4.00

A HISTORY OF VALENTINES—This book is included here because many dealers are quietly doing a small but highly profitable business selling old valentines. This handsome art book traces valentines from the time of their origin through the years when the choicest signed originals were painstakingly made. Hundreds of illustrations from museums and leading private collections. $5.75

No single book on the market today covers the thousands of pages and thousands of illustrations used in the authoritative volumes above.

EXHIBITS OF POLITICAL ITEMS

Collectors of political items were exhibiting displays of their collections throughout the year. R. H. Van Order, of Jackson, Mich., is showing frames from his collection in banks and stores of the middle west during the height of the presidential campaign.

Among other busy collectors for this presidential year is Mrs. Edgar D. Williams, of Akron, Ohio.

Her father, former U.S. Senator Charles Dick of Ohio, was secretary of the Republican National Committee during the McKinley campaigns and left a complete collection of that period, as well as from other conventions. He was usually a delegate and never missed attending a national convention in his 86 years. Naturally his daughter, Grace D. Williams, had a first hand opportunity to acquire first hand editions. Her father's collection now belongs to her. She has two exhibits now in Washington, D.C., and one at the Summit County (Ohio) Historical Society. Plans have been made also at the Ohio State Historical Museum in Columbus, for display.

WARNING!

A Chicago antiques dealer has reported a "City Slicker," who represents himself as a New York artist on a painting buying expedition. In her shop he gave a long list of credentials, purchased two still life paintings of fruit scenes (one showing a glass of wine), 3 by 5 feet and the other 2 feet by 18 inches (one painting signed by Kunze). The man is around 70 years old. His check turned out to be phony and so did the references. Loss, two paintings of the above descriptions. In this particular shop he gave a phony name and address.

Mother of Pearl Satin Glass

Photos don't show that rich color comes 'way down on most. No cracks, no chips, no blisters, no black streaks. All in finest quality.

1. Bright yellow vase, fan frill top; unusual Drape pat. 6" h. 3 3/4" w.
2. Extra Rare: John Northwood (England) exquisite large blue oval bowl, two camphor thorn handles and stems extending 'way across both front and back. And look at those Matsu-no-ke (daisy) camphor feet applied all around base! Also, the rarest pattern in M.P. Satin, an allover wandering rivulet pattern! 11 1/2" l. 5" h.
3. Blue ruffled small vase, Herringbone pattern, 6" h. 3 1/4" w.
4. Rare Miniature Size Cruet: Rose D.Q., frilled 3-corner top; camphor handle and stopper. 4 1/4" highest; 2 1/4" w. Expensive.
5. Extremely Rare Bridal White (D.Q.) frilled oval boat-shape ftd. bowl, berry pontil, and Stevens &

Williams' shiny patent mark. For advanced collector.

6. Rare Miniature Size Oil Lamp: Rose D.Q. (no shading to white). Only 5 1/2" h. to top of matching original ruffled shade; 7 1/2" h. to top of clear chimney; expensive.
7. Robin's Egg Blue Water Pitcher (rare shade of blue), upstanding ruffled or frilled top; most unusual snow white opaque handle; also that rarest of M.P. patterns, wandering rivulets all over! and probably John Northwood's superb artistry while he worked for Stevens & Williams in England. 8 1/2" h. 6 1/2" wide.
8. Rose D.Q. Ruffled Ewer, camphor thorn handle. 7 1/2" h. 3" w. (Some cruet collectors hunt up their own camphor stopper and classify this style as a CRUET. Is that a sin?)
9. Classic Beauty in deep rich 2-color vase, terra-cotta down to pale peach (D.Q.); ivory lining. 10" h. 5 1/2" w.

10. Another Two-color Beauty: and both colors are rare in M.P. Satin, a real deep rich red shading to chartreuse green; the colors alternate in the swirled striping. 6 1/4" h. 4 1/4" w. (This is called Rubena Verde M.P.)
11. Another Two-color Beauty: "Amberina" M.P. - with raised swirled ribbing in antique gold M.P. on soft rich rose. 5 3/4" h. 3 1/4" w. This also has box-pleated top edge (turned in a bit at top, not upstanding as in No. 10).
12. SOLD.
13. Sugar Shaker, deep rose D.Q., original shaker top; 5 1/4" h. 2 3/4" w.

Other choice M.P. examples. No lists, folks. Write me your wants.

Not Pictured:

- a. Signed Karlan Milleflore Paperweight (famous contemporary artist) - opaque pink satin ground with deep rose and lt. green florettes; sits flat; 2 1/2" w. 1 1/4" h.
- b. Vinegar Cruet, bulbous body, slender neck, flared three-petal top; allover crushed-strawberry-rose satin with allover self-color spangling! (White lining of course), camphor handle and stopper; overall ht. 7 3/4", body 3 1/2" w. A beauty, $66.
- c. Sandwich Peachblow Frill Top Vase: Unusually fine color, allover rich wild rose pink, satin finish, rough pontil, same exactly as the one pictured in Mrs. Lee's Art Glass Book, pl. 7, top left; 4" h. 3 1/4" w. $52.50.
- d. Mt. Washington Peachblow Classic Vase, satin finish, good medium coloring; 8" h. 4 1/4" w. Same exactly as the one pictured in Mrs. Lee's Art Glass Book, pl. 7, top center. The wild rose pink comes down two-thirds from top, blending gradually into the very bluish-white. $450.00.
- e. Extremely Rare Moss Agate Glass Vase, 8 1/2" h. 4" w. This is a most beautiful and unusual example because it combines with gold Aventurine also, as well as carnelian-color marbling; wide coin gold scroll collar around the neck. (If you are not familiar with these lesser-known rarities, don't fail to read about them in Revli's very fine book on Art Glass, with large detailed pictures.)
- f. Small Aventurine Glass Urn, allover fine glittering goldstone background with most unusual allover applied turquoise blue over-shot! Clear handles. 4 1/2" h. $20.
- g. Extremely Rare Peachblow Small Oval Footed Bowl by John Northwood (England), with his famous Matsu-no-ke camphor daisy feet all around base. (Same shape top and base as the large M.P. oval bowl #2) but this little beauty is in dull satin finish Peachblow, shading deepest red down to cream color; ivory lining; two applied camphor berries at one side. Note: the tip ends of the berry stems were finished off a little roughly; 4 1/4" long. 3" h. - $72.75.
- h. Two Nicholas Lutz Stemmed Wine Glasses, one in green background with brilliant goldstone wide striping (base the same); the other in rub. Both have clear hollow-blown baluster stems. Each $46.
- i. Rare and Very Ornate Glass Cup and Saucer, cranberry with allover raised rich gold scrolls and enamelled floral scrolls in pastel blues, whites, and light greens. Gold edges and handles. The lavish decor almost completely covers the background. Probably French. $55.
- k. Tiny Milleflore Vases - One in rich amethyst background with allover florettes in white and yellow; 3 1/4" h. 2 1/4" w. $28.50. The other is in green with white and yellow florettes; 2 3/4" h. 2" w. $21.50.
- m. Extremely Rare Lithalite Glass Inkwell - a beauty in this Francis Eggerman 1930 marbled glass; opaque cut and polished panels all around - rich carnelian opaque with darker marbling! Orig. brass hinged top. 3" w. 2 1/4" h. - a rare item at a low price. (tiny pinpoint nicks under the base), $40.

Lots of Other Choice Types of Old Art Glass, high priced and modestly priced according to rarity and what I must pay myself for them. Why not write me your specific wants, folks? I try to have at least one of each kind of art glass in stock, no matter how rare. Do study my recent ads, and Revli's and Lee's Art Glass books. Please do not ask for lists.

MART NEWS

and VISITORS AT 1006 S. Mich., Chicago

Gwen Wilcox of Salt Lake City, Utah, visited at 1006 S. Michigan, Chicago, in August and again brought news of the progress of the restoration of the Bee Hive House in her city. This was the large home built by Brigham Young, second president of the Mormon Church, and organizer and leader of Mormon colonies in Utah and the far west.

Mrs. Wilcox says that the restoration committee's plan is to have the house as like the original as possible, so that it will portray this part of the life of the enterprising Mormon leader. And what an organizer he must have been to irrigate the once arid desert lands and bring stability and prosperity to his followers. History proves that he had fine business acumen and organizing ability.

Stuart Feld, son of Maude B. Feld, nationally known dealer of New York City and an advertiser and friend of HOBBIES Magazine for many years, stopped in for a visit last month. Stuart is completing graduate work at Harvard, his major being American architectural history. Through association he also has a creditable knowledge of collectors and collecting.

Harriet F. Laybourn and her sister, Mrs. David Sholem, owners of the What Not Antique Shop, Paxton, Ill., were among downstate visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold K. Keller from Elizabethtown, Pa., managers of the Elizabethtown Antiques Show were also summer visitors. They stopped enroute to Mason City, Iowa, where they were to attend the Reich American School of Auctioneering.

Arthur G. Peterson, L.L.B., Ph.D., Silver Spring, Md., of the National Institute of Health was also one of our visitors. Dr. Peterson's life has been dedicated to food and food habits in various countries, so it is only natural that his collecting interests should center around old glass with special interest on salt shakers. He is author of the recently published "Salt and Salt Shakers," a volume that is being well received by collectors and dealers throughout the United States. Pictures of 550 Glass Salt Shakers are shown in Chapter II of this interesting edition.

Doris Hamilton of New York City, conductor of our Autograph Department in HOBBIES, stopped enroute to visit relatives in California.

R. H. Van Order, Jackson, Mich., collector of campaign mementoes, was a visitor last month. Mr. Van Order is showing several frames from his outstanding collection throughout the country during the next few weeks.

Mrs. Clifford Morris, doll collector, and Mrs. Frank Schwarz, paper-weight collector, flew to Chicago last month to attend the Crabtree auction, and also visited at the home of HOBBIES Magazine.

Mrs. George Gayler of Maryville, Mo., vacationed in Chicago last month, and included 1006 S. Michigan on her itinerary.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Muus, Sheboygan, Wis., collectors, also took time on a recent motor holiday trip to stop and say "hello".

Preston D. Orem, collector of Aladena, Calif., made a business trip to the Middle West recently and stopped off at 1006 South Michigan. Attorney Orem is a champion collector of old advertising insert cards. He has 75,000 mounted in 200 scrapbooks, all arranged according to the American Card Collectors' catalog. Mr. Orem seems to like most those cards that picture baseball players and he has become somewhat of an authority on the subject of baseball history.

King Hostick, with offices in Springfield, and Chicago, Ill., called to say "hello." Mr. Hostick is a collector of historical documents, autographs, and allied material. Some of the banks of the country have exhibited his collection of signed checks of all the presidents.

Mr. and Mrs. James Duffy of Philadelphia, Pa., stein collectors of 15 years standing stopped by for a visit. Mr. Duffy also collects medals and decorations.

Alex Gurski of Toronto 14, Ont., browsed through back number issues in our sanctum sanctorum trying to get caught up on information about some of the early recording artists. Mr. Gurski has 8000 records and many old books on music.

Mrs. Nora A. Jacobs of Jacksonville, Fla., visited Yellowstone Park, and other western points during the summer and returned to her home via Chicago where she stopped at the Mart for replenishment for her antique shop. Mrs. Jacobs has been in business in Jacksonville since 1937.

Grace and Myron Meier, who have an outstanding collection of salt shakers, and now have their ye olde Shaker Shoppe located at 9304 Og-

ANTIQUES SHOWS

In our many years of listing of antique shows in HOBBIES, we have found that invariably they go off as planned. Occasionally, however, show managers have to change dates or place, or once in a while because of conditions beyond their control cancel altogether. In particular, if you are visiting a "first" or newly established show, it might be well to check the dates and place before starting out, particularly if a great distance is involved, and you are visiting the show for the first time. Telephone ahead to the hall or sponsoring committee to make sure that there have been no changes. In almost 100% of the cases, you'll find that the show will be held as scheduled, but it will do no harm to verify.

den Ave., Brookfield, Ill., dropped in for a "hello."

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brown and their daughter of Parkersburg, W. Va., visited "The Land of Lincoln," during mid-September and took in the Chicago Antiques Exposition and also visited at HOBBIES Home Office. Mr. Brown, a collector of Currier & Ives prints, is a writer, with special emphasis on poetry and philosophical sayings in connection with his study of human nature.

George Siple, Orlando, Fla., made his semi-annual visit to Chicago during the Antique Show, and picked up some outstanding pieces of Art glass for his collection.

R. H. Van Order of Jackson, Mich., political items collector, visited the Fall Antique Show in Chicago, and looked for items there and at the Antique Mart.

Dr. and Mrs. Avery Weisman of Boston, Mass., were convention visitors in Chicago in September. They also indulged their favorite pastime of antiquing. Mrs. Avery collects general antiques, and Dr. Avery is a cane collector with special emphasis on antique and weapon canes.

Mrs. L. S. Ferneau of Louisville, Ky., vacationed in Chicago and environs, and stopped at the collectors and dealers mecca. Mrs. Ferneau has many hobby interests. Her post card collection especially provides her with many hours of relaxation. She has views of covered bridges, Indians, water mills, to mention a few classifications on her post cards. Her button collection features those that have designs of buildings.

Others conventioning in Chicago who called included Mrs. B. Dick, Franklin Lakes, N. J., and Mrs. James D. Spring, Cranston, R. I.

We were pleased to have our annual Fall visit with Mrs. Ed Laughner of Latrobe, Pa., wife of one of our long-time advertisers. Mrs. Laughner attended the annual convention of the stationers and office supply industry in Chicago.

Fall days also brought two Oklahoma City friends—Mr. and Mrs. Phil Anderson, dealers, who were in the Middle West on a buying trip.

Among the out-of-town visitors who signed the guest register recently were:

WARNING!

Some Eastern dealers have written HOBBIES about a trick that has been perpetrated. It seems that the unsavory practice is this. The party issues a check—a good one—for a medium sized purchase. Then he returns, buys considerably more merchandise and issues a bum check. One dealer had a loss of $400, and another $110.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

In all, during the first six months of this year, the Post Office Department has canceled 9,042,454 first day covers. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1960, 14,648,466 first day covers were canceled, involving 27 first day cancellations in fiscal 1959, involving 31 first days. First day revenue for fiscal 1960 was $1,393,331.64.

The Philatelic Sales Agency, Post Office Department, Washington 25, D. C., has handled 929,949 orders in the past eight fiscal years, amounting to $17,644, 913.

With four first day sales scheduled at Washington, D. C., and four at New York, N. Y., during the balance of this year, the Post Office Department reminds collectors that requests for first day covers of each issue must be sent separately, and that outer envelopes or wrappers must be clearly marked as to the issue involved. Any combined orders will be returned unserved.

The 49-Star Flag stamp, issued July 4, 1959, has been removed from sale at the Philatelic Sales Agency in Washington, D. C., as of the close of business, August 31, 1960. A copy of the latest Agency list may be secured by sending stamped addressed envelope to the Philatelic Sales Agency, Post Office Department, Washington 25, D. C.

Five 1959 commemoratives and the 10-cent international airmail stamp of 1947 were removed from sale at the Philatelic Sales Agency at the close of business September 28, 1960. The commemoratives no longer on sale are the 8-cent World Peace Through World Trade, and the 4-cent Lincoln Sesquicentennial, Silver Centennial, Saint Lawrence Seaway and Petroleum Industry Centennial.

The fifth of the American "Credo" stamps, featuring Abraham Lincoln's words "Those who deny freedom to others Deserve it not for Themselves," will be first placed on sale in New York, N. Y., on November 19, 1960, in conjunction with the 12th annual National Postage Stamp Show, sponsored by the American Stamp Dealers' Association at the 71st Infantry Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and 34th Street, New York.

November 19 — the first day of sale — represents the anniversary of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. It also is the second day of the annual exhibition sponsored by the American Stamp Dealers' Association. As in the past a branch post office has been approved for this show, and first day covers will be canceled there as well as at the Main Post Office, Eighth Avenue and 31st Street.

Special dedicatory ceremonies will be held the evening of November 19 at a banquet to be held at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York under the sponsorship of the National Urban League, in observance of "Equal Opportunity Day". This banquet will represent the climax of the League's Golden Jubilee celebration.

Notable Americans and their statements already represented on "Credo" stamps previously released include: George Washington (January 20, 1960); Benjamin Franklin (March 31, 1960); Thomas Jefferson (May 18, 1960), and Francis Scott Key (September 14, 1960).

The sixth of the "American Credo" stamps, featuring Patrick Henry's statement "Give me LIBERTY or give me DEATH," will first be placed on sale at Richmond, Virginia, on Wednesday, January 11, 1961.

—o—

Birmingham, Alabama, has joined the group of cities utilizing one or more die hubs marking "25 Years Social Security in America." In this instance the die hub will remain in use from time of receipt through December 31, 1960.

—o—

Two more memorial stamps—one for Walter F. George will be issued November 4 at Vienna, Ga., and one for John Foster Dulles will be issued between November 15 and 30 at Washington, D. C. A stamp honoring Robert A. Taft was issued October 4 at Cincinnati, Ohio.

I REMEMBER reading glasses,
Steel was used to make the frame,
'Twas before the tortoise shell ones,
And before bi-focals came.

—Spencer C. Ackerman (c)

"Our American Credo" is the title of the Post Office Department's newest motion picture now available for public showings by bookings through the Postmasters of the country.

This sound film is available in both full color and black and white prints, and takes 13½ minutes to show. It features the significance of the six American Credo stamps and should prove unusually popular to mass audiences as well as to civic, social, school, veteran and philatelic groups.

The film, narrated by Matt Crowley, opens with exterior views of Mount Vernon and links George Washington whose "Observe good faith and justice toward all nations" was featured on the first of the "American Credo" stamps, with Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, Francis Scott Key, Patrick Henry, and Abraham Lincoln whose precepts are emphasized on other stamps in this series.

How stamp designs are chosen . . . the Postmaster General's Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee in action . . . the significance of the "Champion of Liberty" stamp are other highlights of this fast moving story.

Requests for this film should be made to local Postmasters.

AMERICANA PAGE

Dedicated to the memory of the founder of HOBBIES Magazine, O. C. Lightner, whose enthusiasm in spreading the cause of collecting and the cultural arts pertaining thereto, left us all a legacy of real beauty. By providing the means of bringing persons together under the mutual

O. C. LIGHTNER, Founder

bond of collecting, he enriched thousands of lives with the formation of new and enduring friendships.

And since by his every act he deserved the encomium of one of his friends, "a real American," we dedicate this the AMERICANA PAGE.

In our lifetime one of the greatest wonders of the world has disappeared before our very eyes. We refer to the American Horse, that galloped across America from the old Spanish Southwest, took over the country for a century and a half, and largely disappeared during the last score of years.

At no period of past history anywhere did such a wide expanse of people have such a personal power unit for almost every family. The horse, as a versatile power unit, required only pasture, a bit of hay and a bit of grain. It set the real pace of freedom and individual independence for the America we know.

Today tens of millions of people watch the horses and riders on TV westerns. The stories are simple and told over and over again. Not one third of the viewers have ever been on the back of a horse. Yet there they are, day after day by tens of millions watching the horses and horsemen.

We have a pretty definite theory that the viewers get a definite feeling and momentum of independence that they can not find elsewhere. We have a feeling that some essential depth to the independent democracy of Americana was somehow linked to the free swing of the horse over hill, over dale.

— o —

Down in south central Africa a skull has been found of some primitive, low brow, man who lived 600,000 years ago according to fairly dependable scientific measures. Those were those far off ages when there were some animals of very large size. This is all valuable in giving mankind a firm physical foundation to stand on. We applaud it. We think continued research on mankind in ancient countries is very valuable.

Today farmers in Iowa, Massachusetts and elsewhere are plowing up old discarded bits of Americana that should grace museums if they were more perfect and better understood.

We note the purchase by the State of Wisconsin of the site of a 113 year old sawmill. It is near the old Wade House stagecoach inn, and will be part of the Wisconsin State Forest.

Sawmills and sawmill sites are not things that can be assembled in museums. It is well that many of our states are showing alertness to their most significant history by protecting natural spots that best reflect some of the most significant aspects of their history. Certainly Wisconsin deserves a place in the sun in the lumber industry.

Americana was a land of lumber and horses. Wood for building, fencing, fuel and machinery, and horses for power and transportation. We are lucky to have preserved in our museums many of the items made of wood before the wide advent of metals. A few old wooden bridges are preserved, and in the Ozarks there are a very few old rail fences yet to be seen.

In building we have largely run through our great heritage of lumber, and have reverted to the modern "mud hut" made of sand, cement, brick and glass.

The recent building boom has perhaps done more damage to the historical geography of our cities than all that has gone before. Bulldozers have crushed out the historical along with the merely dilapidated and unsafe properties.

In general Americana in its growth pushed into new and still newer areas for up to date, more modern, residential districts. It left the older houses and buildings for low income immigrants and others needing shelter at low cost. But always in these slowly developing slums there were spots of past culture stubbornly retained that gave an aura of past culture and gentility in the very midst of this decay.

Some areas, like the Battery section of New York City kept their place in the ancient sun merely by replacing old small buildings with large new modern buildings without skipping from here to there. Others were like New Orleans where the old French Quarter was deliberately protected as far as possible as historic landmarks.

But during our recent building boom almost fanatical "slum clearance" has suddenly swept away historic areas, sweeping poor and good buildings alike into rubble. In many such cases "Resettlement" has been a shabby joke on the older low income buildings at modest rentals.

"Urban Renewal" has vastly improved parts of our cities. But there are many things to be considered in its future use.

— o —

The whole world seems to be on one grand "security" binge. "Freedom," "Democracy" and all of that stuff is secondary to some sort of promise of something to eat and a place to sleep for life.

In the new half hungry countries any two-bit would-be dictator seems to get a following by any promise to share the wealth, with the words "freedom" and "democracy" dangling from his speeches.

Even in staid old U.S.A. the campaigns make plain that what people want now is less and less of the old restrictive interpretations of the Constitution and more and more public punch cards giving some public money to most everyone.

Perhaps the tremendous increase in world population in the past 50 years has made food and shelter a more pointed problem than they were before. Perhaps our greater crowds of people are getting in each others way more than ever before. Perhaps in spite of science and invention the personal problem of survival is greater than ever?

It is only a hop, skip and a jump back into history to the abundant natural resources of Americana—the land where the word "freedom" first reached the greatest heights in the world. Can it be that we are ill fitted by history to hear the world's battle songs of "freedom" and sense behind it the cry for "security?"

Bringing Out the Best

RHODE ISLAND — HOBBIES, is fascinating. I read every line of it and the articles on music are particularly enjoyable to me because I have 10,000 records — 4,000 Edison discs — several hundred cylinders and 6,000 of almost all the other makes such as Victors, Columbias, Deccas, Grey Gulls, Regents, Monarchs, Zonophones and so forth and so on.

I have carefully collected these since 1917 and I can say with truth and honest pride I have the best of all kinds in music. I have 8 Edison disc machines. I also have a large collection of women's and girl's and men's footwear in rare styles and best of condition. Also some rare books. I have several friends who are collectors with discrimination, taste and means. Having a hobby is an outlet for one's better nature and this means real benefits in many ways.

If more persons practiced "hobbying" in worthwhile things it would be an advance in culture, raising people to a much higher level of living. It (hobbying) is becoming more and more a practice and such a good thing will increase as long as attendant conditions prevail. I find in my music hobby a constant spiritual benefit. Other hobbies dealing with very old things afford pleasure in care and prospects of much greater value as time adds value to the things of olden times.

Good success to your fine publication through all time. — Otis R. Anderson.

Paperweights

MASSACHUSETTS — Your magazine is most wonderful. I became interested in paperweights and went through back numbers and found nine with wonderful descriptions of them. No matter what one wants to know about many things they will find out all about them in HOBBIES. Many thanks for all who write for it. — Eva W. Tingley.

Assurance

MASSACHUSETTS — Enclosed is our remittance of $3.50. It assures us of the regular monthly visit to our home of HOBBIES Magazine. — Edwin K. Welz.

Good!

MICHIGAN — Receiving HOBBIES as a birthday gift from my daughter-in-law has made me a happy, but incurable subscriber. — Mrs. Bert Holland

Each Month a Vacation

CALIFORNIA — With pleasure I renew. Really take a day's vacation each month when I sit down to read HOBBIES. Keep 'em coming. — Vera M. Cain

Travelers to Tennessee

TENNESSEE — My ad in your magazine certainly helped my business. It is certainly grand to have people come by from far away places to see my antiques, and usually make purchases. Also, I have made many steady customers by mail through my ad. — Mrs. B. A. James

HOBBIES Saved

IOWA — Find that I have practically every copy of HOBBIES since I subscribed. Peeled one out of the middle of the pile and it was February, 1946. So you see how much I enjoy them. Am glad you have kept the Lightner page. — Mrs. Wayne Myers

Off Again & Running

FLORIDA — Here is my renewal subscription for the next year. Sorry I was late with it but the years slip by ninety miles an hour. Very good results from ads (as always) though I was not active in business for several years, but here we go again! Best good fortune for your staff and all subscribers and advertisers during the coming months. — Eileen M. Wadhams.

Can't Miss 'Em

TENNESSEE — In the rush of vacation I simply neglected to send my check for renewal so please send me current issues if at all possible to keep my file complete, and to keep me from missing two wonderful issues! Dolls are my first love, but I am interested in all antiques, too, so I read the magazine very thoroughly when it first comes, then all month I pick it up and keep enjoying it. This summer I made my third trip to the Lightner Museum of Hobbies in St. Augustine, and enjoyed it more than ever. It is a real treat each year. Thank you for your lovely information and entertaining magazine. Enclosed is my check. — Mrs. Warren C. Mounts.

East, West; Sub's Best

MISSOURI — Have just run across the magazine HOBBIES for October, 1957. Am very anxious to subscribe as I can not find it in any newsstand in St. Joseph, Mo. I see the price listed as $3.50 and if price has changed you can notify me. Would like to have a copy at once even if it is last month's. — Mrs. Frank L. Clark.

STONEHENGE

—An Inn in the Early Connecticut Tradition—

CONNECTICUT — It is amazing how many letters we've received since the appearance of the story about "Stonehenge" in the August, 1960, issue of HOBBIES. I am grateful to you. — Victor Gilbert, Skinner.

Good Source

MASSACHUSETTS — As collectors of antique glass and furniture and U. S. Coins, we use your magazine. — Mrs. M. D. Batchelder.

Gifts For Christmas Planned Ahead of the Rush

VIRGINIA — I am enclosing my check for $3.50 for a renewal of HOBBIES for a friend's subscription. I am delighted with HOBBIES and think it is the nicest present I can give for a gift. It is a wonderful magazine for collectors, and I am planning on giving some subscription gifts for Christmas. Thanking you, and with best wishes. — Kathleen K. Rucker.

Hobbies' Book on Antiques

KANSAS — I have been VERY interested in the Quiz Ads for THE WORLD OF ANTIQUE ARTS. If I didn't have a copy I couldn't resist getting it. As it is, each ad rekindles my desire to send for several copies for Christmas presents to my closest friends whom I know would be delighted to own the book. — Mrs. Ernest Rogers.

To Walsh

NEW YORK — I enclose a check in the amount of $10 for HOBBIES for the next three years. I find it one of the most absorbing publications I have ever taken. A tip of the hat to Jim Walsh and his series of articles on Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists. — Burns M. Kattenberg.

Like a Branch Post Office

CALIFORNIA — I would like you to know that I certainly didn't realize long ago what I was missing by not having an ad in HOBBIES. I feel like I have a Branch Post Office, I receive so much mail and so many nice mail orders — also have made lots of new friends. I read HOBBIES from cover to cover, never in my life have I received so much pleasure from a magazine. — Rose Meldrum.

This Can't Go On!

COLORADO — Enclosed is a check for $3.50 for a year's subscription to HOBBIES Magazine. My grandmother has taken HOBBIES for quite some time now, and one copy in the family was sufficient. Although it was quite hectic at times (just after the new copy arrived). Now that we are separated by about 1200 miles, I get each copy about one month late. This just won't do. So here's my money. Please start with the September issue. — Dwight Lanmon.

We Accept With Pleasure

DELAWARE — Please accept my enclosed check for one year's subscription to your wonderful antique and hobby magazine. I enjoy it very much. — John McDonald.

And Quality Counts

Not Hard With HOBBIES

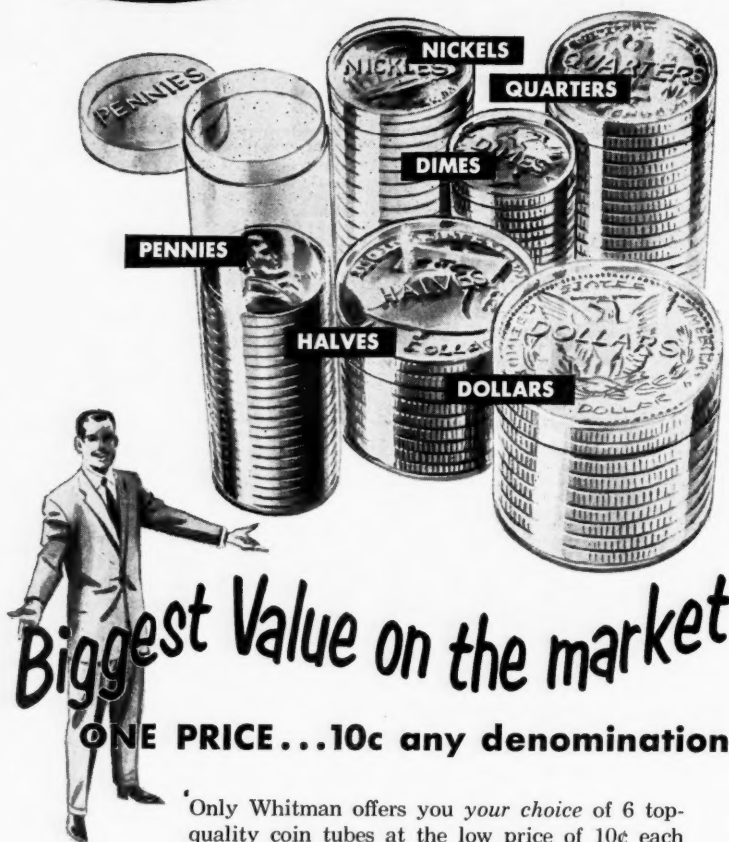

INDIANA — Sorry, I forgot to send my check. Just couldn't miss a month without your fine magazine. I collect Drop Rose Haviland and have found some hard to find pieces in HOBBIES. Thanks for renewal reminder. — Mrs. Clifford Blancett.

Getting Better

TEXAS — Please extend my subscription another year. Each year gets better and I should know as this starts my 13th year. — Mrs. H. H. Bomar.

Items Used as Money

By CHARLES FRENCH

Numismatics can cover a wide variety of items. The term does not necessarily refer only to coins and paper money. It refers to items that were used as a medium of exchange.

Many items were so used. In the early days of civilization the first steps away from barter were the acceptance of some easily movable item as a medium of exchange.

A wide variety of items have been used as money. In some parts of the world salt, shells (included here is the Indian Wampum), stone money, chocolate disc money, cocoa beans, cloth, leather, feather money, furs and skins, glass, grass and grain, bones and hair, beads, nails and jade, burlap, parchment, seeds and tea—have all been used as money. Not to forget our recent "cigarette" money of World War II and Korea.

Now we come to odd shapes found in primitive money. In China there were "key" money, knife money, amulet money, boat and bullet money. In other parts of the world, there were ring money, plate money, bar money, cross, spear and ax money, tree, feather and fish-hook money, bridge, spear and pack saddle money.

These primitive forms of money were made to represent items of demand at the time. The ancient Romans used to transport huge cast-bronze or copper plates, shaped like a hide. It is understood each of these was valued at one steer. A truly crude medium of exchange that would be acceptable to the ignorant savages with whom they would be dealing!

Sierra Leone, salt money. Salt was pounded in a bamboo basket 3" x 14", sealed at the ends with mud. These were used as "bride money" and given to the father of the bride—ten to the father, and he in turn donated one to the bridal feast. This was payment for a wife.

Bone money. The Chinese used arrow-heads of bone as money. American Indians used bone discs. The Sioux used human finger bones, teeth, and beads as Wampum. Nose and ear bones, and shell ornaments of South Sea Islanders were also used as money.

In Alaska, the Hudson Bay Co. bought one martin skin from natives for so many pearly shell buttons with copper or brass shanks that were accepted as standard payments. Smaller buttons of similar type were used to purchase walrus tusks, furs, etc.

During the inflation period in Germany after World War I money was made out of burlap, silk, linen, veneer wood, cardboard, porcelain and leather, plus a wide variety of unusual metallic alloys.

Siamese bullet money in silver was struck in many denominations from 1/64 tical on up to 10 tical. The 8 and 10 tical are very rare. There were also 20, 40, 60 and 80 tical pieces struck as presentation coins for the death of the king's mother.

Burma had a most unusual coin, a heavy silver ring for wear on the arm. It contained heavy spikes for hand to hand combat and was used as a weapon and shield.

Chinese tree money, for many centuries the common and popular Chinese cash was cast, not struck. The money was cast in molds made in the form of a tree, with rows of coins on either side, the metal "flash" in the center. Owners would then break off a coin as they needed it.

The Tauma Islands Solomon group had money made of hair mixed with clay and plected. Australian natives made coins of Triodia gum and human hair.

Rum, gin and whiskey were very importantly used as money in our early days when trading with the Indians. One railroad is said to have paid its workers with whiskey after the Civil War.

The Philippine Islands used crude brass rings, with knobs at the edge, to purchase food. One ring was worth three chickens.

During the Gold Rush days of the West, gold dust was used as money. The usual charge was a "pinch" for a drink, etc. Bartenders with large fat fingers were in demand! After this, crude bars of gold were made out of the dust, and passed as money. These are very rare.

The ancient Celts used gold necklaces, arm-bands, rings, anklets and earrings as money and ornaments. All are very rare. As to the funeral money of China, it was the custom of the Chinese for centuries to bury coins with their dead. This is why so many ancient Chinese coins are available today. Now the custom is carried on but imitations of papier mache and tin-foil pasted on cardboard are used.

While the bamboo tally-sticks of China were associated with counting racks, they were also used as money and had denominations of from 1 cash to 1000 cash. They ranged in size from 1" to 6" and were inscribed by the issuer and with the denomination. These were popular in banking houses and might be given credit as being the first, or forerunner of "paper currency" used throughout the world today.

Such unusual coinages are natural. For they represent the natural evolution from trade and barter down to a medium of exchange acceptable to those using them.

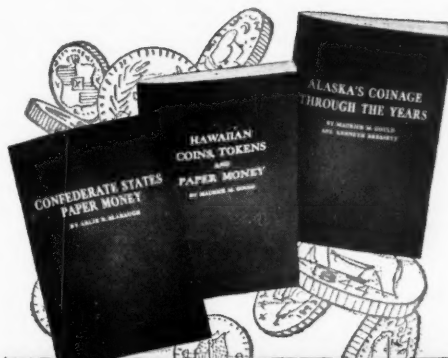

The very early Chinese knife and key coins first had a ring at one end to hang around the neck or belt. Then the design became more ornate, with wording around the hole.

After that the next development was the elimination of the "knife" part, leaving just the ring with the hole in the center. These were the earliest "one cash" coins so well known today with the square hole in center and legend around it on both sides.

COIN QUIZ

By CHARLES FRENCH

COIN QUESTIONS answered for 25c per letter to help defray costs. Do not mail us coins in question.

Question:

Have a World Columbian Exposition, Chicago 1893, U.S. Mint Exhibit Treasury Dept. size of silver dollar. Has gold finish. Please advise as to value. U.S. Gov. building on front. Has length, width and area on front. —J. W. M., Florida

Answer:

The medal you have should retail for around $2.50.

—C. F., New York

Question:

I have a $5 Federal Reserve note in excellent condition. It is Series 1950 "A." This note has a Serial No. of H 84206305A on the left side, and No. H 48206305A on the right side. I was told at the Federal Reserve Bank that to their knowledge, this has not occurred in this district at any time previously. What is its value? —J. M. O'N., Missouri

Answer:

The note you have is indeed very unusual with the numbers different. I have never seen one of these, and it would be difficult to tell what it would be worth. I believe you should get a very good premium for it, however. The only way to dispose of such an item would be to put it up at auction and see what it would bring.

—C. F., New York

Question:

I have taken coins as a topic for my English class and I must have a letter from an expert like you. I would appreciate a letter from you very much. I would like to know if there is any way to polish a coin without taking away its value.

—E. E., Illinois

Answer:

The cleaning of coins depends upon a lot of things. If the coins are in excellent condition it does not harm coins if they are cleaned in the right manner. The way to clean depends upon what the metal is. Gold can be cleaned with soap and hot water. Silver can be brightened by making a paste of baking soda and water. Copper should only be cleaned by an expert.

—C. F., New York

Question:

I am enclosing a foil impression, also pencil rubbing of an 1803 one-cent coin. The condition seems to be a little better than good, but I am unable to tell if the date and decimal 1/100 are in small or large numbers. Would you please tell me the value of this coin? Also an 1832 half-penny in excellent condition, very sharp; and a 1775 silver 2 real piece.

—H. I. S., Florida

Answer:

The coin you have is the large fraction small date variety. The coin seems to be near fine, it retails as follows: good $2; fine $4.

The 1832 half-cent, ex. fine, retails at $4.

Question:

Please appraise the following bill and coin: 1. Lg. 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ " x 3" dollar bill (silver certificate), Series N 2700 1.378A, Frank White, Treasurer. H. Speelman Register of the Treasury. Good condition. 2. (50¢ size) thin, worn Carolus III Gratia 1789 one side; Hispan with other illegible printing on other side.

—J. T., California

Answer:

The note you have is only worth a premium if it is in fine or better condition. The other coin is a 4 real piece of Charles III, Spain, and if badly worn, worth 50¢ only.

—C. F., New York

Question:

Please send me the information on this coin.

—C. E. F., N. Carolina

Answer:

The coin you have is a 10 reis piece of Portugal, 1765, under Joseph I. Its value is 75¢.

—C. F., New York

Question:

What would be a fair selling price for an 1854 gold dollar? The coin is in perfect condition except by looking at it under a magnifying glass you can see where some one has scratched the word April.

—R. S., Illinois

Answer:

The scratched word April is a mutilation and greatly reduces its value. Normally, if in very fine condition, dealers are now paying $15 for this coin, sell for $20. I'd say if you could get $7.50 from a dealer it would be good.

—C. F., New York

Question:

Have an 1853-0 mint half dollar without arrows or rays. The coin Book lists as rare.

—M. H., Iowa

Answer:

If your 1853-0 mint half dollar is without arrows or rays it would have to be examined by an expert to determine whether there is a possibility of the arrows and rays having been removed by someone. There is no information as to how many of these were made. There have only been two offered, one around 1867, and this sold for around $150. Another, in 1909, sold for $600. Today, a genuine would be worth quite a lot of money. However, it would have to undergo many rigid tests to determine its genuineness.

—C. F., New York

Question:

I wish information on two coins. One is copper with "Our Army" in large letters, a wreath and small dots on the outside of it. There is a star at the top of the letters and a mark at the bottom. On the front is a head with long hair (profile) and a hat, pointed, with folds. There are a series of stars on either side, 12 in all. Liberty at the top and 1864 at the bottom. A mint defect goes from back edge of the hat to the outside of the coin. The other coin is silver. Has a shield with a crown at the top. On one side of shield are letters IPA, and on other R with a star S. The word Philippus and something at the bottom I can't distinguish, but might be VGS or VDG. On other side is a round shield with figures inside, around outside the name "Hispania-Rum Rex," and date 1733 with * separating them.

—B. E. B., Rhode Island

Answer:

The first coin you have is one of many varieties of Civil War tokens being quite common. It retails for around 50¢.

The second is a Spanish coin of Philip V of Spain. As no size is given I cannot give you its denomination. If the coin is in good condition it is not worth much, but if it is in fine or better condition it could range between $1 and $20 depending upon denomination.

To the memory of my beloved,
The AUTHOR

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

SHAKESPEARE, ENGLISH DRAMATIST

Part II - The Folio Works

By PAUL W. SCHMIDTCHEN

Here is one who inimitably gives vent to his own misgivings, and his somewhat beleaguered marital experience. Read the following lines from Twelfth Night:

“Let thy love
be younger than thyself, Or thy affection cannot hold the bent.”

Such a one was bound to give full measure to each human experience in a true and honest proportion. And he invariably got away with it!

Never, earlier or since, has anyone so ably managed to capture and chart the involved and ubiquitous machinations of the natural roistering of man. Yet, the dramatist, possibly again in retrospect, says with Achilles in Troilus and Cressida:

"My mind is troubled like a fountain stirred;
And I myself
see not the bottom of it."

To be sure, we should not fall into the distressingly common error of purportedly finding in anyone's literary endeavour all manner of personal reflection. Autobiographical allusions are replete, both in Shakespeare's poems and plays, but the interpretations can be overdone.

Suffice it to say, Spenser in his Colin Clout identifies the promising newcomer in this fashion:

"And then—though last,
not least—is Aëtion:
A gentler shepherd
may nowhere be found,
Whose muse,
full of high thoughts' invention, Doth like his name,
heroically sound."

And even Chettle, the publisher of Greene's invective (mentioned in Part I) made an apology for the actor's intemperance before the year was out by stating:

"I am as sorry as if the original fault had been my fault, because myself have seen his (Shakespeare's) demeanor to be no less civil than he is excellent in the quality he professes, besides divers of worship have reported his uprightness of dealing, which argues his honesty, and his facetious grace (comedy) in writing that approves his art."

No greater accolade, more over, can any competitor give than the famous lines of Ben Jonson found in the First Folio of 1623!

Shakespeare's plays, although the dates of production are still, to a large extent, conjectural, total 36 to 38 according to most listings. Remember, however that many so-called expert bibliophiles will disagree as to just what should be included.

Even some of the 17 quarto titles, issued separately during his lifetime with his name attached, are suspect. Nineteen before 1623.

In any case, one could reasonably assume that the first collected edition in 1623, superintended as it was by his fellow actors, John Heminge and Henrie Condell, would be above reproach, even though 17 plays appeared in its pages for the first time. (Twenty by other calculations!) Let us consequently start with this most valuable compilation.

In critical value, the First Folio has no peer. It is the sole authority for The Tempest, As You Like It, Julius Caesar, Macbeth. Measure for Measure, Anthony and Cleopatra, Twelfth Night, Coriolanus, Timon of Athens, The Winter's Tale, Two Gentlemen of Verona, Comedy of Errors, Taming of the Shrew, All's Well that Ends Well, Henry VI, Cymbeline, Henry VIII.

This grouping, at least of 17, would normally have been lost to us otherwise. The remainder, albeit in a changed form perhaps, to some extent could have been resurrected from previous printings.

It is entirely possible that a few of the dramas, herein included, could have come from the author's original manuscripts. But there can be little doubt that incipient change, with or without Shakespeare's con-

Two Noble Kinsmen, with the understanding that the dramatist was only partly responsible for some of the lines. Titus Andronicus, the three parts of Henry VI, The Taming of the Shrew, Timon of Athens, and Henry VIII were probably also written with some collaboration; or they may be a "touching up" of some previous plot by another.

Seven plays were added to the 1664 and 1685 Folios, because Shakespeare's name or the initials W. S. were found on earlier editions—Sir John Oldcastle, 1600; The London (Continued on page 110)

BOOKS REVIEWED

HALF CENTURY SCRAPBOOK OF VARI-TYPE FIREARMS cataloged by F. Theodore Dexter, P.O. Box 1218, Burbank, Calif. Photography by Orville Logan Snider. Copyright 1960. 203 pages. Paperback. Looseleaf. Price $7.50

This privately published, limited edition is based on the Pictorial and Descriptive Catalog of Frank E. Bivens, Jr. The collector must find the Table of Contents like a dream, such are the rare examples shown herein, with 96 plates of fine pictures.

Here is a high point in metalcraft with its pictures and descriptions of inlaying of ivory, shell, gold, silver; its "knocked up" or repousse decorations; its engraving, chiseling, chased work, pierced work and coloring of metals. The discussion of methods by Alvin White is valuable.

Factual details of arms are well cataloged and shown. The historic information "thrown in" is enriching. Take Plate 11, 1063. "Massive Wheellock Double-loading Wall Gun . . . 1630-1640 . . . in the period of Matchlock and Wheellock Firearms, the home or castle held all the specie and jewelry wealth of the owner. The family strong room held great wealth. This type of massive rifled Wheellock gun was kept loaded in the home, and could serve as a property defense gun, or an alarm gun. . . . On the cheek-piece . . . ivory inlays, a boar-killing scene. . . ."

The field is wide. Page 82 and Plate 36 portray a pair of Persian Flintlock Pistols made for a Shah, the acme of beautiful artwork. Page 100 and Plate 45 show Flintlock "Duck-foot" Multishot Pistols, unique, charming, rare. Sword pistols, cased duelling pistols, Paris Apache daggers and knucks! Here is a book historically and artistically rich.

ELEMENTARY TEACHERS GUIDE TO FREE CURRICULUM MATERIALS, 17th ANNUAL EDITION. Educators Progress Service, Randolph, Wis. 346 pages. Copyright 1960. Price $7.50.

This edition lists 1298 items of which 547 are new. It is a schedule of selected free maps, bulletins, pamphlets, exhibits, charts, and books.

Among the subjects listed in the Table of Contents are: Accident Prevention and Safety; Air Age Education; Business Education; Clubs, Hobbies, Scouting, and Special Days; Fine Arts; Health and Physical Education; Home Economics; Language Arts and Arithmetic; Science, etc. The material is designed for both elementary and junior high school levels.

This material is well organized for easy use. For instance, the Subject Index makes the material easy to find, and the Source Index makes it easy to order.

This cyclopedic service should be very enriching to this educational field.

EDUCATORS GUIDE TO FREE FILM-STRIPS, compiled by Mary Foley Horkheimer and John W. Diffor, 12th edition, 1960. Educators Progress Service, Randolph, Wis. 163 pages. Price $6.

Here are 624 free filmstrips from industrial, government, and philanthropic organizations, available to superintendents, supervisors visual education directors, teachers, librarians, church, club, and community groups.

How to secure the filmstrips is told on Page IX.

The "Contents" include Accident Prevention and Safety, Agriculture, Art and Handwork, Business education, History, Health and Social Hygiene, Home Economics, Science, Sports, etc.

One "listing" says: "The Belgian Congo, Silent. This filmstrip shows the location, history, natural resources and life of the people of Belgian Congo. It also depicts the occupations, customs, traditions, recreations, communications, education, health, and self-government. This filmstrip may be retained permanently. Audio Visual Associates."

Fascinating arm chair travel and richly educational material are made available through this service, it seems to me.

PIECES OF FATE by Clarence M. Fink. Published by Royal Publishing Co., 7918 Maxwell Drive, Dallas, Texas. Copyright 1959. 146 pages.

Did you know that the Aztecs were using white goose quills of gold dust, cacao beans (from which comes chocolate), and cotton cloth as money exchange when the Spaniards took Mexico?

Did you know the first mint in the New World was established by the Spanish in 1535? They also established one at Potosi, with its fabulous silver lode in 1753, using coinage presses made of wood hauled by American Indians over 700 miles from Argentina.

Here are stories of early private minting of gold in America. Of diox notes and how Dixie came to be written. How women came to be used in the Bureau of Printing & Engraving. Of early currency and banknotes. Of Merit Awards and Decorations.

Stories, too, of P. Napoleon Breton and his Canadian Tokens? Of Canadian money, English money, and others. Here are facts and informative pictures on rare coins, historical and otherwise, American and foreign.

I found the variety of facts on numismatics, and the pictures presented in this book definitely interesting.

COVERED BRIDGES IN ILLINOIS, IOWA AND WISCONSIN by Leslie C. Swanson. The Swanson Publishing Co., P.O. Box 334, Moline, Ill. Copyright 1960. 40 pages. Paperback. Price $1.50

Here is the story and description of the remaining covered bridges of the above area. The three styles of covered bridge building used are given: the Burr arch-truss type, the Town lattice-truss type, and the Howe plan of vertical tension rods and timber diagonals.

Why the bridges were covered, the costs, and the nostalgic sentiment and sympathy for Americana life and well told by one who has a warm sympathy for Americana life and legends.

There are 26 illustrations showing bridges and including three maps which help "pinpoint" bridge locations so people on an outing may find and enjoy these charming symbols of a past era.

Prodigal, 1605; A Yorkshire Tragedy, 1608; Locrine, 1595; Thomas, Lord Cromwell, 1602; The Puritaine, 1607. Only the above mentioned Pericles of this lot is not considered spurious.

In like manner Arden of Feversham, 1592; Fair Em, 1592?; Edward III, 1596; Mucedorus, 1598; Merry Devil of Edmonton, 1608, are similarly excluded despite their sponsors. That some of the dramatist's earlier works may have vanished goes almost without saying. Love's Labour Won, may have been in this category, if not the later Taming of the Shrew or some other with title changed.

Spenser, we know, wrote comedies, but none have come down to us, unfortunately. All of this once more supports the pronounced value of the Jaggard Folio in preserving the total.

There can be little doubt that not all Elizabethan plays went beyond a manuscript copy, and that the constant revision soon lost sight of the original. Why should Shakespeare in this way not have suffered accordingly?

Published plays simply did not sell well. The general public was not at all enamored by their importance. A valuable theatrical record called Henslowe's Diary gives ample evidence of the mortality in contemporary stage performance.

Ben Jonson, for instance, supervised his own folio works in 1616. We know it is far from complete. Thomas Heywood, by his own admission, had a hand in over 200 plays, but only 12 were printed. Dekker, Webster, and the other playwrights suffered likewise.

Francis Meres in his 1598 Palladia Tamia speaks highly of a dozen Shakespeare titles. As earlier put, some 17 were formally printed by 1616. It was not until 1623, however, that the numerous family was put together for enlightened reading.

The appeal must have been immediate for a Second Folio was necessary in 1632. This, in turn, was followed by two issues of a Third Folio in 1663 and 1664. The Fourth (and final) 17th Century Folio appeared in 1685. The first illustrated edition came out in 1709-10. It was also the first manual text, the first with a biography of the author, and the first in octavo format.

Collecting Checks of the Presidents

By DORIS H. HAMILTON

Collecting checks of the presidents is not just a pastime of their First Ladies!

Orders to pay, signed by one of the presidents, have an appeal almost as universal as money itself. Brief in form, they are autographs which do not need much explanation. A check is a familiar thing to any one who knows that the first of the month is not just the day when a new page comes up on the calendar.

On March 15, 1955, the collection of Edward Stern was sold at the Parke-Bernet Galleries, Inc., New York City. There were two important parts of the Stern Collection: autograph checks of the presidents, and franked envelopes of the presidents.

Although the Sale took place over five years ago, the prices fetched are still important. Similar material offered today is compared with the examples offered at the Stern Sale.

Highest prices were paid for checks which looked like checks. This sounds like Gertrude Stein's explanation of a rose: "A rose is a rose is a rose."

A printed form, completed in the handwriting of one of the presidents, is better than a check which is entirely holographic. For example, a check with "To the Bank of Alexandria" printed, and "Dollars" and "Cents" printed, and then filled out and signed by Washington, is more valuable than an order to pay entirely in Washington's autograph.

If a check gives biographical information it is more interesting and more valuable. The fact that Zachary Taylor made out a check from New Orleans, dated December 4, 1827, to himself as "Col. Z. Taylor" makes the check more desirable than a check not denoting his rank.

If there is anything dramatic about the check, the value is increased in direct ratio to the amount of drama: the greater the drama, the greater the price. Lincoln's check in this Sale, made out to his son, R. T. Lincoln, about two months before the assassination, brought $400, the highest price of the Sale.

It is challenging to try to complete a group of presidential checks. The checks of the current and most recent presidents are virtually unobtainable.

One collector managed to exchange checks in the amount of 1¢ with a few famous people, including Franklin Delano Roosevelt. If there is a check of Eisenhower or Truman on exhibition it has probably been borrowed for the occasion.

In the Stern Sale there was not an example of a John Tyler check. I know of only one Tyler check ever to come on the market.

Nor did Stern have a check from Franklin Pierce. From Polk, Stern had a check only endorsed by Polk. Unfortunately, it was not a check which Polk had written out to himself.

For Garfield, Stern had an order drawn on the "Sergeant-At-Arms, U.S. House of Representatives" filled out by Garfield, for $100. This was probably a salary advance, as was the Polk item. Stern did not have an Eisenhower nor a Truman check.

Among the commonest of presidential checks are those of James Madison. Perhaps this is the case as Dolly was so extravagant.

Monroe checks are almost equally abundant. One of the most amusing checks in the Stern Sale was a check of Monroe's. A manuscript check. It brought $12.50. It was made payable to William Thrift!

Most presidential checks can be purchased in the $5 to $50 range. Here are the ones which fell in this range at the Stern Sale:

Benjamin Harrison	$ 5.00
James Madison	10.00
Chester A. Arthur	10.00
Calvin Coolidge	10.00
James Monroe	12.50
William McKinley	15.00
John Quincy Adams	17.50
Warren G. Harding	17.50
Grover Cleveland	30.00
(check endorsement only)
Andrew Jackson	40.00
James Buchanan	40.00
Millard Fillmore	45.00
Martin Van Buren	47.50

The following between $50 and $100. Could have been purchased for:

Herbert Hoover	$52.50
William H. Taft	55.00
Rutherford B. Hayes	60.00
Theodore Roosevelt	70.00
U. S. Grant	70.00
Thomas Jefferson	75.00
Andrew Johnson	75.00
William H. Harrison	80.00
Zachary Taylor	80.00

Hot-Shot Furnaces

By HARRY WANDRUS

What is a hot-shot furnace and what is hot-shot? Well we might answer that the first is a furnace or device for heating solid cannon balls to a red or white heat so that they become the second, or hot-shot.

The idea of hot-shot goes back to the 16th century, but it didn't take hold as a real functional device until several centuries later. Many devices were used before red-hot cannon balls, and some were in use concurrently at later times.

Many variations of flaming bombs were in considerable use. Some of idea was, of course, to set fire to the opponent's vessel and with better luck to set his powder magazines afire.

Penetration of wood was not better with hot-shot than cold-shot. Exceedingly deep penetration was not desirable because insufficient oxygen prevented combustion. The passage of hot-shot through the air actually kept it warm by air friction. Because of its solid nature, it did not cool too much even after skipping over water.

The early use of hot-shot found it being heated over an open grate—a onto the tracks of the upper end of the furnace, and, in their passage down the slope, would become heated to red or white heat.

Firing cannon, using hot-shot, was not too much different than the procedures used with conventional projectiles. The tube was wet-swabbed after each shot, the powder bag was rammed home toward the breech and then a dry wad of hay was placed up against this.

Upon this was placed a wet hay or clay wad. The powder bag was then punctured, the red-hot ball rolled into the barrel another wet wad placed on this (what for—hw?) and the piece fired.

Powder bags used were of the same type used in conventional firing. They were made of special paper which would burn well without residual sparks.

The insulation provided by the wet hay was so effective that a red-hot ball could cool in the tube without igniting the powder. However, few gunners would take the risk and fired as rapidly as possible, as much for reasons of safety, as to keep the wad from dampening the gunpowder.

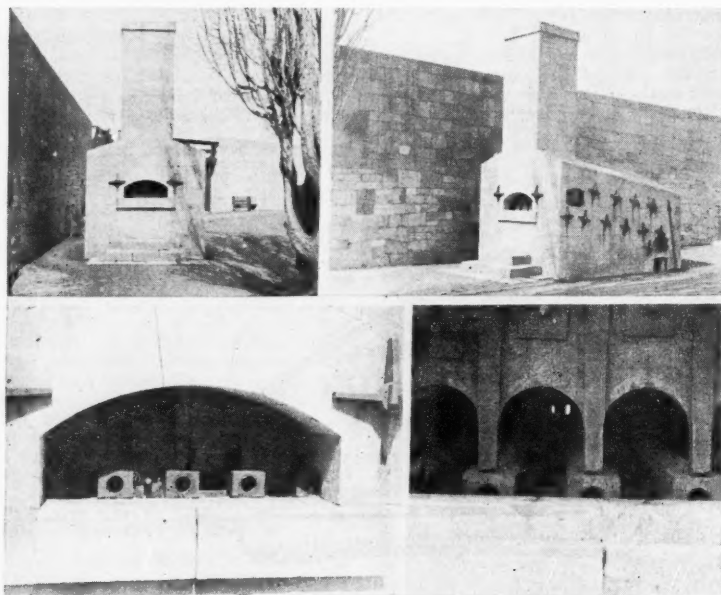

The steam generated by the heated hay wads was enough to issue forth through the vent hole. This clearly indicated that, within only a short time, the powder would indeed become wet.

Hot-shot and cold-shot were much alike in their ballistics. However, it is reasonable to expect that slightly smaller balls might have been made for the former to allow for expansion.

Penetration of similar calibered balls was the same, but since it was desirable to have the hot-shot set wood afire, smaller charges of powder were used so that there was little penetration of the ships' wooden sides. Theoretically anyway the hot-shot would become imbedded in the ships and set them afire. Loads varied, and were anywhere from 1/4 to 1/6 of the comparable load for cold-shot.

A great many of the coastal forts in this country had hot-shot furnaces as standard equipment though it would seem that few of them ever were used in actual battle.

Two furnaces at Fort Sumter, S. C. were destroyed during the Civil War. Two Forts in Miss., Fort Pike and Fort Macomb, still have hot-shot furnaces; so do Fort Morgan in Ala., and Fort Jefferson and Fort Marion these, known as carcasses, were round balls filled with pitch and having a number of vents. They burned with intense heat.

These found use even into the middle of the last century. Hot-shot was used during the siege of Gibraltar in 1782. With its help the British destroyed a part of the Spanish Fleet.

Hot-shot was designed to be used primarily against ships, both by ships and by land fortresses. The very slow and tedious method. The French began using a furnace in 1794, and the idea was soon brought over here.

A cold furnace took some time to heat up a solid ball. Shot required one hour and 15 minutes to heat up, an almost impossibly long time if the enemy was in sight.

A hot furnace could bring a 24 pounder to red heat in 25 minutes; 32 and 42 pounders, a little longer. In action, the cold balls were dropped in Fla. A complete furnace is to be seen at Ft. Niagara.

This last is probably the most complete furnace in the northern United States. The present furnace was built here in 1839 by American Engineers though earlier ones had been in use as early as the time of the War of 1812.

The foundations of such a furnace exist at the Fort Pulaski Monument near Savannah, Ga. Also, the Castillo de San Marcos National Monument has a small furnace which was built during the 1840's.

Hot-shot went out with the coming of the iron-clads which could not be penetrated by round balls, and the rifled shot, which depended on close contact of shell with the rifled barrel, could not be heated because of this.

Equipment used by cannoners servicing hot-shot furnaces included the following. Two-handled ladles carried the hot-shot from the furnace to the cannon. Pokers helped keep the fire going. Rakes removed ashes from the furnace. Rasps helped scrape away the scale after the shot had become red-hot. Tongs with circular jaws helped pick the ball out of the furnace and place it in the ladle. Tubs full of water cooled the tools when they became overheated.

It often took three men to keep a battery in action, supplying it with the required hot-shot.

The British Royal Marines have opened a museum at the Royal Marine Barracks Southsea, Hants. The Society, through its curator, Colonel M. Archdall seeks donations, loans, and purchases of any material pertaining to the Corps. —o—

British Military Uniforms by W. Y. Carman devotes 190 pages to English uniforms in the period starting with Henry VII and ending at the present. Emphasis is on the periods treating 1485 to about 1900, with this latter section understandably given less space.

It has 120 contemporary illustrations, many in full colour and taken from the fine collections of Her Majesty the Queen, the British Museum, and the National Portrait Gallery. Available from Leonard Hill (Books) Limited, 9 Eden Street, London, N.W. 1, England. Price is 66 shillings, with 2 shillings for postage ($9.52).

CORRECTION

The Great Coat Pistol was erroneously described in the September issue, page 112, as "The Great Colt Pistol," through no fault of the author or department conductor. The error was made in transcribing in HOBBIES offices.

It is Indian summer. The rising sun blazes through the misty air like a conflagration. A yellowish, smoky haze fills the atmosphere, and a filmy mist lies like a silver lining on the sky. The wind is soft and low. It wafts to us the odor of forest leaves, that hang wilted on the dripping branches, or drop into the stream. Their gorgeous tints are gone, as if the autumnal rains had washed them out. Orange, yellow, and scarlet, all are changed into one melancholy russet hue. The birds, too, have taken wing, and have left their roofless dwellings. Not the whistle of a robin, not the twitter of an eaves-dropping swallow, not the carol of one sweet, familiar voice. All gone. Only the dismal cawing of a crow, as he sits and curses that the harvest is over; or the chit-chat of an idle squirrel, the noisy denizen of a hollow tree, the mendicant friar of a large parish, the absolute monarch of a dozen acorns. —Longfellow

PLAINS INDIAN CULTURE

A Plains Indian culture that had at least some affiliations with the highly advanced Pueblo complex of the Southwest flourished in the Midwest about 250 years ago. This so-called Dismal River culture of Western Nebraska and Kansas, eastern Colorado, and southeastern Wyoming apparently represents a period of domination of the region by tribes of Apaches, first encountered by white men in western Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona.

The culture as revealed by the archaeology of village sites of the area is described by James H. Gunnerson in a bulletin recently published by the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution. Ethnologically the Apaches were a so-called Athabaskan people presumably originating far to the north, who made their way southward over a period of centuries, occupied the high plains for a time, eventually gave way to tribes like the Pawnees and Chippewas, and went southward to become a scourge of the Pueblo villages.

For a time, it is indicated by the Dismal River remains, named for a small stream in north-central Nebraska, they must have lived together with the more advanced Indians who finally ousted them. Traits common to both are found in the Apache sites. During the time of their occupancy, the remains indicate, they made incursions far to the south and borrowed various elements of Pueblo culture.

Hitherto this Dismal River complex has been somewhat of a mystery in western prehistory.

"The archeological evidence," reports Mr. Gunnerson, "indicates that the Dismal River people possessed essentially the same hunting and skin-working tool used by other Plains groups around the year 1700. . . . Traits showing contact with the Southwest are equally specific: Pueblo trade sherds, turquoise, and drills show . . . striking similarities to those of Pecos, the only eastern Pueblo from which comparative data are available. More surprising are the similarities between Dismal River and the Promontory culture of Utah—close enough to suggest that the Promontory culture represents Dismal River hunters who followed bison herds into the Great Basin."

Only their type of lodge, Mr. Gunnerson says, was entirely unique with this people.

It now seems apparent, he says, that the Apache groups came into

"WINTER COUNTS"

Calendar of the Dakotas

The Dakota Indians of the Northwest had unique calendars—the so-called "waníyetu wowápi" or "winter counts."

These were in the form of charts giving a picture of some outstanding event for each year over a series of years. Thus they were not only calendars of a sort but also dated historical records.

The term "winter" in the Dakota language is equivalent to "year." A person is spoken of as "so many winters old," instead of so many years. Many of the pictures are of events which actually took place in summer, spring, or fall.

Report of a study by Dr. James H. Howard of nine such calendars, originally drawn on hides and later on strips of cloth, which have been preserved in various collections but not heretofore published, has just been published by the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution.

In some ways, his study showed, the calendars were quite reliable—as calendars. Moreover, broadly interpreted, they reveal much of important features of Dakota culture during the periods covered. Usually the same year in the different calendars is designated by the same picture.

Historically, however, they hardly can be relied upon, Dr. Howard found. The "historians" were quite prejudiced in favor of their own viewpoints toward events.

"It was found," he reports, "that the different counts although presenting nearly identical pictographs for a given year, and obviously describing the same incident, ascribed entirely different identities to the participants. One account might mention that a Dakota killed a Crow, another that a Crow killed a Dakota, and still another that a Dakota was killed by an Arikara." The tribal identification of the person and his assailant was left to whoever was keeping the winter count at the time. "Interesting changes were noted in the insignia used to identify persons of different tribal groups in the various counts, and in earlier and later years of the same count."

The locations mentioned in the various counts, however, seemed to agree to an exceptional degree regardless of the chronicler.

"FIRST FAMILIES" OF VIRGINIA

Virginia had a long history before Jamestown.

Its real "first families" were apparently Indians of unknown tribal affiliations in the truly primitive food-gathering, hunting stage of culture before pottery and before the introduction of the bow and arrow.

Six "time horizons" are differentiated in a study of Indian occupation sites in five western Virginia counties by Dr. C. G. Holland, conducted under the auspices of the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution. Collections of prehistoric objects were made at 82 sites in Augusta, Bath, Rockingham, Highland, and Rockbridge Counties. The report has just been published by the Bureau.

At the bottom, Dr. Holland found, were two "pre-ceramic periods" during which apparently the only artifacts were chipped stone knife blades, axes, probable spearheads, and the like. The bow, actually a rather sophisticated weapon, was to come considerably later.

During the first of the pre-ceramic periods the predominant stone used by the ancient Indian artisans was quartzite; then followed a period of shifting to the harder, flint-like rock, chert. Both were obtained locally.

The chipped stone periods were followed by the four pottery periods, distinguished by differences in technique, which extend up to the time of the earliest white settlements. In the eastern United States generally it has been agreed that pottery-using cultures are correlated with the introduction of sedentary village life and the development of agriculture—a long step beyond the earliest stages of culture.

No articles of European manufacture were found in any of the Indian sites. The Jamestown colonists of 1607 apparently never reached so far west in their explorations. A Spanish mission has been reported to have been established earlier on the Rappahannock river, but no Spanish artifacts were found.

Woodrow Wilson $120.00
Franklin D. Roosevelt 130.00
John Adams 180.00
George Washington 375.00
Abraham Lincoln 400.00

It is almost superfluous to say that prices have gone up since the Stern Sale. A Washington check in the desirable printed and autograph combination sold recently for $525. A Lincoln check would readily realize a similar price.

The only presidential check which might be lower is that of Calvin Coolidge. Supply and demand govern the prices of autographs, too.

The interest and the challenge of presidential checks will continue to lure collectors into this variation of the presidential theme.

Campaigning with Post Cards

PART II

By JEAN HEIDER

National figures today rely on TV and radio to reach the masses. But I have found post cards were used voluminously for this purpose in the first two decades of the century. Their discontinuance now is a great loss to us collectors.

Previously the platforms, slogans, and characteristics of contending potential presidents inspired post card publishers and artists to some of their cleverest creations.

Taft, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson used more post cards in their campaigning than any of the other presidents. Very few post cards were used in later campaigns.

In my presidential collection I like to collect not only the campaign cards, but also those about the candidates' personal lives, families, and the important events during their administrations. It is also interesting to add cards about their achievements, and famous people with whom they were associated.

Very often a biography or encyclopedia will reveal data linking post card subjects you already have with a famous person in whom you are also interested. A complete biography on cards can be compiled just by following one subject's life closely and incorporating the cards about places, events, and things associated with that figure.

Check a little closer on your favorite famous person. You will be amazed to find how many cards in your collection can be fitted in with him.

A few examples will illustrate.

George Washington, and the signers of the Declaration of Independence, as well as those concerned with the Constitution; Theodore Roosevelt, and the Panama Canal; James Monroe, and the Monroe Doctrine, etc.

Books and presidential papers are helpful in collecting data. Then the pursuit of post cards to match the data makes your collecting a challenging, intriguing game filled with anticipation and satisfaction.

Theodore Roosevelt was an extremely colorful presidential candidate, certainly to contemporary post card publishers. Both he and his family were "post carded" in many political and social activities.

The "Teddy Bear" which became his political symbol inspired numerous post card series.

The largest and most popular was the "Roosevelt Bears" series published by Edward Stern and Company, Inc., 1907. Each of the numbered cards reproduces a painting of the Roosevelt Bears in comic antics favoring T. R.

They were so popular they were re-produced four-times-enlarged in book form. It was called The Teddy Bear Book for 1907, on sale that September 1 at G.V.S. Quackenbush & Co., Troy, N. Y. There is little doubt public acceptance of the delightful Bears was a great help at election time.

Rueckheim Brothers, and Eckstein, Chicago, Ill., made it possible for everyone to have a set of the 16 Cracker Jack Bear Post Cards. Each design depicted Teddy Roosevelt or the Bears or both in an amusing situation with a jingle in favor of T. R., along with advertising for Cracker Jacks.

Card No. 15 shows Teddy treeing two bears in Yellowstone National Park. One pleads, "Oh, don't shoot, Mr. President, we're the Cracker Jack Bears!" The other reassures, "Yes, we met you at the White House in Washington, remember?" The jingle reads:

Oh, Mr. Teddy, drop your gun!
For us such business is no fun.
So please don't keep us on the rack
'Cause we're the bears with the Cracker Jack.

The cards are 3x5½ inches, and all 16 could be secured from the company in return for 10 sides from Cracker Jack boxes or 10 cents.

With my presidential post cards I have related items which cannot be found on post cards. Old advertising cards pre-dating the Post Card Era pennants, streamers and illustrated advertising material fill in what otherwise would be gaps in the record.

I should like to emphasize that many of my "ace" post cards were found among the lowly, despised, and rejected comics—not only presidentialists but other special subjects as well. For years while others were rejecting comics I kept all that came my way. Many now hold prized places in my collection.

Campaign cards are hard to find, but I hope some day to complete my presidential collection and so preserve what might be an otherwise lost historical record.

Even though we are primarily interested in post cards, it is only right to consider that some collectors like to delve deeper into a specialized subject than post cards will permit.

Of original presidential material it is difficult to find variety on post cards much before 1900. To follow the subject the pre-Post Card Era necessarily brings advertising cards into our hobby material.

They are one of the fore-runners of the post card. In fact, some of the earliest post cards were advertising cards with post card backs. Advertising cards have been found dating back to the 1850's.

No matter who your choice for president is, keep any campaign card you can get. Tomorrow it will be a collectors' item.

MINIATURIA

Miniature Dolls Portray Last Supper

By DOROTHY H. CLAYBOURNE

Hanging above the mantel in the L. R. Berry home in Valley Center, Kans., is this shadow box portraying Da Vinci's famous painting of the Last Supper.

The shadow box contains fully dressed character dolls, miniature furniture, food, and tableware. A painted background gives it a three-dimensional effect.

Mrs. Berry had a dream. It began several years ago when the Berrys visited the Forest Lawn Memorial Park in California and were impressed by the stained-glass replica of the Last Supper there.

Some time later Mrs. Berry, already possessor of a colorful doll collection of magnitude, visited a doll museum at Eureka, Ark., with her husband. Here they saw miniatures of the U.S. Presidents and their wives.

At this time she conceived the idea of recreating the Da Vinci painting, with dolls and a shadow box. Through her membership in a doll club, she received a doll from Jerusalem.

She even wrote to that biblical land for assistance in carrying out her scheme. No one could supply her with the character dolls she wanted.

Mrs. Berry was not to be daunted. If she could not find her dolls ready-made perhaps she could find someone to create them especially for her.

About a year ago in an old issue of HOBBIES, she found an advertisement for the Saroff Studios, creators of custom-designed dolls, in High Ridge, Mo.

She wrote to them telling of her plan and submitting a picture of the Forest Lawn window. Immediately she received an affirmative reply from Joseph P. Peek, founder of the Studios.

By the middle of June she had received her dolls and her tableware (dishes, wine, glasses, bread, plates of fish). All these Mr. Peek made for her.

Every doll was designed from the Da Vinci interpretation hand-made, dressed (to the sandals on their feet), and painted by Mr. Peek. Both Mr. and Mrs. Berry worked for several days making the box, and table, and chairs.

A friend painted the background scene as much like the original painting as possible. Mrs. Berry searched widely to find exactly the right fabric, with a gold stripe, to match the tablecloth in the stained-glass window illustration.

The completed box is 36 inches wide, 24 inches high, and 12 inches deep. It is surrounded by a 4-inch gold frame, with a spotlight mounted at the top center.

The figurines are made of a composition devised by their creator. They are approximately 8 inches in height. Mr. Peek's dolls, or figurines as he prefers to call them, are used, for educational purposes in museums, churches, libraries, and schools, as well as in private collections.

When asked what he thought about using dolls to execute Da Vinci's world-renowned masterpiece, Mr. Peek said, "I thought of how my work might reach men's minds—regardless of race or creed—to inspire them to love God, and to make them better men."

The shadow box project was finished by July 1. On July 4 the local newspaper, the Valley Center Index, printed an announcement of an open house at the Berry home for those persons interested in viewing the exhibit.

The first day 150 guests came. Since that time the Berrys, who operate the Berry Hardware Store in Valley Center, have had visitors from eight cities in Kansas, 10 different states, and from Canada.

CIRCUSIANA

Questions and Answers

By DANA W. STEVENS

Q: Do trapeze aerialists really "float" through the air?

A: It often appears so, but such is not really the case. Actually their bodies move at tremendous speeds during the execution of aerial tricks. For example, it has been estimated that Alfredo Codona, one of the great aerialists of all times, traveled at a speed of forty miles an hour or better during the execution of the triple somersault. Yet he always landed in the hands of his catcher as lightly as a swallow.

Q: How do aerialists manage to hang on to each other's hands when they come together on a trapeze?

A: When aerialists work together in flying leaps, they catch each other's wrists, not their hands. Falls in this kind of aerial work are often caused by perspiration. When a man flies through the air toward his partner, his hands sometimes slip along the wrists and his hold misses. This is the reason that aerial acrobats tape and powder their wrists and arms.

Q: What is meant by the Hagenbeck method of wild animal training?

A: It was Carl Hagenbeck who was observant enough to notice that animals are as different as men and women in their natures. Like humans there are good and bad lions, for example, happy lions, lazy lions, stupid lions, and some who are treacherous and totally unreliable. By the Hagenbeck method a trainer becomes the friend of his animals. He wins their confidence and their respect. He can turn his back on them with reasonable safety. He does not shout at them unless they begin to menace him or one another. He never strikes them, and he never intentionally tries to frustrate their natural urge to bite and claw. He stops an attempted attack by thrusting a chair or wooden pole in their way and thus lets them vent their cat-like anger on these. When they do the right things he applauds them with words of praise, and gives them a morsel of meat. In time they learn exactly what is expected of them, and once they learn they turn in top performances.

Q: When the Gainesville Community Circus was still operating did it ever travel very far?

A: On a few occasions it did, but generally most of the performances were scheduled within an 85-mile radius of Gainesville. Most of its personnel usually drove to the lot by auto after working hours, with just enough time for quick costume changes.

Q: Wasn't "Old Bet" the first elephant to be worked in this country?

A: This is a fairly common assumption, but actually, the first elephant ever to set foot on U.S. soil is supposed to have been shipped from Bengal in a ship called "America." It reached New York in April, 1796, and was shown at Broadway and Beaver Street before being taken on tour around the country. Purchase price is said to have been ten thousand dollars.

Q: When did Old Bet die?

A: She was killed in 1827, somewhere in South Carolina.

Q: Who was the keeper for Gargantua?

A: Richard Kroener was the only one Gargantua ever seemed to have the slightest liking for.

Q: How tall was Gargantua?

A: At fifteen years of age he was 5 feet 7½ inches tall.

Q: What do you consider the greatest challenge for a circus collector?

A: I would think that circus history offers the greatest challenge simply because circus history remains so incomplete. I would venture to say that one could spend his entire life just tracing circus beginnings and organization on this continent alone.

GEMS and MINERALS

LAVA

By H. DOUGLAS BROWN

As a suggestion to the new "rock-hounds," the age of specialization can have meaning for the mineral collector too. No one can have everything, but by taking up the collecting of one type of mineral and specializing in the most colorful, most unusual, or some other peculiarity such as types best for polishing, the novice can soon have a collection that none other, at least in his neighborhood, can match.

Lavas have such a variety of types they offer a real challenge, and one that will soon require specializing in one's specialty. For instance, in a recent article we told of the lava (a basalt type) that occurs along the highway on the Friday Ranch just north of Madras, Ore.

This lava is about half way between a rose-red and a fire-engine red. It is crushed and put on the roads, where, mixed with macadam, it makes a very interesting roadbed and is quite a relief from the glare of concrete. It is cut into blocks and these go into ornamental building facings. It is further crushed and pulverized and used as a pigment.

On another section of the Friday Ranch the lava is a rhyolite with birds-eye effect. This takes an excellent polish and has a striking pattern when finished. Its hardness is just under 7, or nearly as hard as agate.

On the Sunset Highway (Seattle to Spokane) just east of Douglas on the grade out of that Coulee, the lava is orange to red, and hard, too. The lavas near Vantage and on Wenatchee Mountain have multitudes of amigdules, usually agate.

The lavas of the American River on the road to Natches Pass have amigdules of great variety. Some are agate, some opal, but others have fillings of green material, or red, or orange color, even bluish. One piece 3"x4" may have a half dozen different types and colors of fillings.

Lavas around Bend, Ore., take fantastic shapes. These are, perhaps, the most recent and best preserved in the West. Many collect pieces simply for the odd shapes occurring.

Lavas of the porphyry type in the San Poil Valley of Washington state, have varied colorings. That on the south fork of Meadow Creek, a tributary of the San Poil, are truly purple. Those on the Consolidated Mines, upper road, are gray with twined black hornblende crystals in profusion. This also takes an excellent polish.

A green, highly silicious lava occurs on the Upper Entiat River, west of the Columbia River, 20 miles from Wenatchee, Wash. Mexico has a green lava much used in Mexican jewelry.

Then there is the lava (another rhyolite type) that occurs east of Tonopah, Ariz. This is so colorful it is termed Wonderstone. It takes a polish equal to agate. Has many colors and tints and patterns. Much good jewelry is made of it. A similar type, though not quite as colorful, occurs in Nevada, near Battle Mountain.

The most recent lavas are from the Pacific Islands or Italy; or from such far away places as Ascension Island 8000 miles away. The picture shows graphically the tortured folding and stringing, like pulled taffy.

Finally, there are the crystallized lavas of the basalt type that form six-sided crystals standing like those of the Devil's Post Pile the Giant's Causeway of England, and of many other places. These, when in small diameter, are used for stepping stones and other yard decorative purposes.

All in all, specializing in lavas can be a most interesting and rewarding hobby.

METEORITES

An assembly of meteorites that came to earth in southwestern Kentucky on September 20, 1950, has recently been acquired by the Smithsonian Institution. This consists of about 16 pounds of fragments recovered in 1955 by Hugh Howard, a diligent collector. Mr. Howard spent several months in Callaway County, Kentucky, canvassing 60 square miles to determine the area showered by this meteorite fall and to recover if possible all pieces of any meteorites that might be there.

This particular meteorite bears the scientific name of carbonaceous chondrite. It differs from most meteorites by its unusually high content of carbon. Meteorites are thought originally to have been part of a planet that exploded many millions of years ago. The pieces became luminous only after they entered the earth's upper atmosphere. Because of the velocity with which they move, these pieces collide with the air with such great force that the surfaces get hot enough to melt the outer layer.

This stone, called Murray, attracted much attention when it illuminated the sky and countryside from St. Louis to Louisville and from Memphis to Knoxville, Tenn. The blinding meteor was observed for about 4½ seconds before it exploded into fragments. Its explosion shook homes and buildings from Paducah, Ky., southward to Memphis.

The meteorite pieces showered Kentucky farmland over a 25-mile area. In all, about 95 pieces were recovered by 29 farmers. The largest weighs about 8 pounds and is displayed at Vanderbilt University, Nashville. A total weight of about 50 pounds was originally recovered. Five buildings were struck by this fall and the roof of one house was penetrated.

Smithsonian mineralogists state that this meteorite represents a rare type, and that the generous supply of material in the acquisition will make possible a detailed study that may shed some light on the origin of this and other chemically similar meteorites.

SALUTING

The Snake River Gem Club and Chamber of Commerce have arranged a permanent display of rocks and minerals in the lobby of Hotel Washington, Weiser, Idaho.

Out-of-town collectors are invited to see the display.

Included in the exhibit are rare minerals displayed by John Glass, and beautiful book-ends placed by Mrs. Leona Griffith.

It was Mr. Glass and his wife Dorothy who discovered a 237-pound geode near Weiser last Fall. The immense agate, which is still unchallenged as world champion, remains on view at the owners' home and visitors are invited.

Weiser is 70 miles Northwest of Boise, at the juncture of U.S. Routes 30 and 95, a short drive from the spectacular scenes of world-famous Hells Canyon.

The Cardboard Court

By EDGAR HEYL

On November 1 there opened at the Peabody Library in Baltimore, Md., an exhibit titled The Cardboard Court: Playing Cards Through History. It will run through December 31 and may be seen Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

The Peabody Institute Library is one of the great privately endowed libraries of this country. Opened in 1866, its fine collection of over 300,000 volumes has long served researchers in many fields.

A strong program of exhibits is under way all year, usually two being of major importance. The present exhibition is the second important one this year, and is the third one on the history of playing cards held there. The two previous ones were in 1952 and 1955.

The bulk of the loans comes from the collections of Dr. Albert S. Loewenson, John J. Beck, and Edgar Heyl of Baltimore. In addition there are a number of rare early cards loaned by the Walters Art Gallery, Cincinnati Art Museum, the University of Pennsylvania, and the Smithsonian Institution, so that the exhibit is an unusually comprehensive one. Also shown are many fine and beautifully illustrated books on the history of cards from the Peabody collection, as well as loans from other contributors.

It is not possible to list here everything on display but some of the more interesting and unusual cards in each of the 13 categories will be described. The earliest known cards that are still in existence, those painted by Gringonneur for Charles VI of France in 1392, are represented by a photograph of one especially made for the exhibit by the Bibliothèque National in Paris. The 15th century section includes some German engraved cards of 1466, the 1470 round cards of Cologne, and a sheet of cards from Lyons, France, made ca. 1500.

The earliest English cards shown are the complete Heart suit of the Winstanley geographical cards of 1665. These are followed closely by a complete deck of the Popish Plot cards of 1679.

Various representative decks of the next three centuries are present. These include the Crowquill transformation cards of ca. 1850, as well as some modern finely designed decks.

The section of French cards includes the two Duval sheets of educational cards, a geographical deck of 1669, and his Jeu Des Princes of 1677. The 18th century cards, among others, are an uncut sheet, as well as a number of early single cards of this era. The later material is highlighted by an especially beautiful educational deck of the early 19th century.

Among the German and Austrian cards on display will be found one of the Jost Ammon cards from his printer's deck of 1564 and two sheets made by Hans Forster in Vienna, ca. 1565-1570. Later centuries, especially the 19th, are represented by many uncut sheets of cards and fine specimens of characteristic decks.

The Italian, Spanish, and Mexican cards include an 18th century deck by Solesi of Genoa, some cards of the same era in sheet form early 19th century Spanish cards, and some particularly handsome decks of more modern times.

The Oriental cards section includes specimens from Japan, China, Korea, India, Persia, and Iran. The earliest shown are sets of the rare Unsun and Hyaku-nin Isshu cards from 18th century Japan. The 19th century group contains Hindu and Persian cards. Later periods are represented by characteristic cards of the other countries.

Of special interest is the group of cards from Russia and her other satellites behind the Iron Curtain. From Tsarist Russia is the beautiful 1830 geographical deck the rest of the cards being from the modern regime and including two decks of the mid-1930's, one anti-religious. Also present are cards from East Germany, Red China, and two recent Czechoslovakian issues, one a Proletarian satirical deck, and the other the Kovo (metal industries) deck.

The American section begins with the Christopher Sauer religious game cards produced in Germantown, Pa., about 1740. Close to this is a group of playing cards which were used as cards of admission to the classes at the Philadelphia College in 1770.

Following this is an early 19th century fortune-telling deck, and cards made by some of the better-known manufacturers such as Samuel Hart, A. Dougherty, Laurence &

Cohen and the Russell & Morgan Printing Co., as well as such little-known makers as the Carte Fabrique Co. of Mansfield, Ohio. Also present are the first American round cards made by Globe in 1874, and many later illustrated decks.

War cards, not often seen, are well represented, beginning with the Jeu De Drapeaux sheet of 1815, followed by a number of Civil War decks. The Spanish-American War is commemorated in the Budweiser Army and Navy deck while German and American cards depict the First World War. The Spanish Civil War, too, is represented in an unusual deck while the Second World War is shown in some special American issues.

No exhibit would be complete without a showing of Tarot and fortune-telling cards. This section includes the fine, modern facsimile of the Cicognara deck of 1484 an Alliette deck, a number of 19th century French, and Austrian Tarots, as well as some more recent examples.

Among the most fascinating of all types are the transformation cards and this section includes some of the most famous issues. Here are French sets from 1819 and 1830, as well as a complete set of the four Tegg sheets as reprinted in Munich but with the text in Dutch, plus a modern issue of the Binet sheet with the grotesque heads. Present, too, are the three major American examples of this type, the Tiffany Harlequin, Vanity Fair, and the Hustling Joe decks.

To bring this exhibit up to date is a group of modern finely designed cards produced both here and abroad in the last decade or so. These are all illustrated cards but a number have been designed by well-known artists.

In the latter class are decks designed by Cassandre, Leonor Fini, Andre Francois, Toni Stursa, and Paul Mathieson. Among the others are the Saks 1920, Three Musketeers, Florentine, Herme, Arate, Altman Cashmere, De La Rue Commemorative, and the 1929 Fournier Exposition decks.

Concluding the exhibit is a section of cards either made of unusual materials or odd in shape or design. Here are to be seen cards made of bone, aluminum, iron, lacquer-work, and plastic, plus an early 19th century Apache Indian deck painted on leather.

Also present are miniature and

ALLIBONE'S DICTIONARY OF AUTHORS

By RAYMOND J. WALKER

One of the best buys in books this writer ever made was when he discovered three large volumes on a second-hand book stand in Newark, N. J., in 1919. They cost fifty cents for the set and have proven a very valuable reference work in the past 40 years. These volumes have opened the way to many lines of research. When all other references fail regarding some person who appeared in print before 1850, he can usually be found in Allibone.

The full title—of this massive labor of love—is "A Critical Dictionary of English Literature and British and American Authors Living and Deceased from the Earliest Accounts to the Latter Half of the Nineteenth Century Containing Over Forty-Six Thousand Articles (Authors) with Forty Indexes of Subjects" by S. Austin Allibone. Vol. I, Childs & Peterson, Philadelphia, 1859; Vol. II, J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia, 1870; Vol. III also Lippincott, 1871.

Samuel Austin Allibone (1816-1889), American author and biographer, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., April 17, 1816, of French Huguenot and Quaker ancestry. He was privately educated and for many years was engaged as a merchant in his native city. His chief fame rests upon the dictionary noted above. From 1867 to 1873 and again from 1877 to 1879, Allibone was book editor for the American Sunday School Union, and from 1879 to 1888 was librarian of the Lenox Library in New York City. He died in Lucerne, Switzerland, September 2, 1889. There is a "Memoir" of Allibone by S. D. McConnell, an address delivered before the Historical Society of Philadelphia (1890).

We have read criticism concerning the moralistic criticism of Allibone in this work. It was his work and he was entitled to issue the results of his labor in a style that was pleasing to himself. There are errors, we have found many, especially in dates, but these were so obvious that we may attribute them to weary tradesmen working with fine print. One cannot realize the long hours of labor and patience that were required to produce such a compendious work. He missed the 46,500 mark by one in these biographical articles that range from a few lines to several pages. He lists the works of each writer with the notes of praise or criticism by others and references to each author in biographical works, magazines, reviews, or where they are mentioned by other authors, and this was done as thoroughly as possible, considering the facilities available a century ago. With modern machines and various library catalogs available a similar project covering the writers of the last century would be a monumental task. This work of Allibone was handwritten in the days before the typewriter and some of the errors may be attributed to hastily written lines and dates hard to decipher, etc.

Most of the prominent writers of his day were appreciative of the author's labor and we will list a few who are still familiar to the general reader of our times: W. H. Prescott, Henry W. Longfellow, Edward Everett, George Bancroft, Washington Irving, W. C. Bryant, Oliver W. Holmes, John G. Whittier, W. Gilmore Simms, N. P. Willis, Fitz-Greene Halleck, Roger B. Taney, and Benson J. Lossing.

In a note Allibone states that this work was projected in 1850 and completed on May 29, 1866. First preparation for printing was made August 1, 1853. He spent five years revising the letters O to Z, and on October 11, 1870, had all ready but the indexes which appear in the third volume.

An analysis of these indexes reveals there are 75,158 names of authors classified under subjects in alphabetical order. Authors appear under more than one head and Allibone was satisfied that the total authors was 46,499. By subject it would seem that Divinity has interested most writers and he has record of 12,829; Poetry comes second—5,194; Biography and Correspondence—4,596; History—4,189; Essayists—3,490; Law—3,175, and Education—3,119.

As for names of authors arranged by alphabet, the letter S has the most 6,219; W comes second with 5,748, and B is third with 3,647, with P a close fourth with 3,603. As for family names the Smiths lead 810, more than double that of the next name Wilson with 330, and Williams 325, and Taylor has 251 for fourth place. Allibone did not include his own name in this massive work but there is little doubt that he must have written something before he sat down to this great reference work, which is even valuable as a check list if never consulted for any other reason.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT— SO IS A RARITY

By JACK LEVEL

An old Western phrase runs "Gold is where you find it." Does that apply as well to the antique?

In the seemingly most likely places to find remembrances I come up empty handed. On a visit to the Southeast last winter I inquired in several shops for Civil War antiques, but was informed that the Yankees had garnered all of them.

I collect golf (sooner or later every collector runs up a sideline). I have a category of Civil War sports, and sports of the presidents of the United States I have never picked up a golf antique in the world's cradle of golf, St. Andrews, Scotland, and its environs.

A British writer around 1910 described all Long Island as a vast golf links. In 20 years of collecting I have gathered in nothing of any consequence from this section, in which I live. The same goes for Chicago and Boston, second and third respectively in golf's background and traditions.

New York City, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Denver, Atlanta, Detroit, New Orleans and other cities have yielded few treasures. In some of the antique shops in these cities the shopkeeper has looked bewildered when an inquiry was made for golf. Some dealers never heard of golf, at least I found this to be true in New York's East Side where I go through the motions of a golf swing simultaneously with my inquiry.

Where then does the golf collector go for his rare or excessively rare items? Where does the collector of any other specific rarity go? Is there a boundary or is there just luck. If he finds his way to the most logical sector for the gold he seeks, will it be there? It may well be but the chances are that surprises are in store.

Massachusetts, followed by Connecticut, leads all states as the most virgin territory for the golf rarities which I have gathered for two decades. There seems little rhyme or reason for it. Some of the finds come from towns too small to support a golf club.

The entire South and the Rocky Mountain and Coast States are "out of bounds" in results. So are Florida and Texas where golf-runs as wild as the duffers. The Border States are not a paradise for golf antiques, nor are the Prairie States.

The rare items mined up through constant advertising and personal research and publicity come mostly from small towns and shops on RFD routes, and consist of old prints, calendars, steins, books, jewelry, post cards, and oddly-patterned balls and clubs. I believe the owners of shops in these communities study the advertising pages of HOBBIES more than do their city brethren who like to sell to visitors and browsers and big collectors from the hinterland.

Book concentrations, however, are in the cities or in smaller communities that are centers of learning. Old magazines, like Harper's and Leslie's, turn up largely in places where there is a background of culture. The runs reach the markets from estates and small libraries cleaning house or closing.

Most of my old Harpers and Leslies were purchased in upstate New York and in Pennsylvania. It is incredible that so many volumes have survived, and is due, of course, to the fact that binding of magazines 100 years ago was more of a standard procedure with publishers than it now is. This goes for England as well.

One would think that most golf steins would show up in Germany, or at least would have been made there. However, The Lennox Company in New Jersey and firms in Waltham, Mass., manufactured a variety of steins, jugs, and tankards, all hand-colored with golfers and golf backgrounds.

Some of the best golf art looms up in these tokens of the 19th hole. None has been made since around 1900 in any part of the world.

The British went in for hand-painted china, including plates and vases. Their golfing art is striking, and of historical value. Some china, beautifully colored was manufactured in France, resold in this country, and carries an American trademark.

The Germans made some intricate scoring devices. The Yankee manufacturers countered with paperweights, hatpins, match-boxes, sewing baskets, umbrella-stands, statuettes, book-ends and weather-vanes.

Practically all deluxe and rare golf books are of Scottish origin, and with few exceptions the rarest golf art is English. The early Dutch and Flemish artists painted literally scores of golfing scenes, mostly on ice, but these were never reproduced in large quantities.

The U.S.A. has been the center of art in post card form, and Christy, Gibson, Flagg, Maud Humphry, and others have given us the fashion plates of golfdom of the flash age along with its romance. Richards gave the golfing world a memorable and unique series of six members of golfing royalty, titled "The Royal Game of Golf," back in 1901.

This was distributed in a deluxe illustrated jacket, and only two sets of the six prints with original jacket are known to exist. It is odd that an American artist should make himself an authority on the golfing gear of kings and queens dating back to the 15th century.

Out of New England, where the Yankee trader usually is able to find some golf art above the cracker barrel, came A. B. Frost who did more than 200 drawings on golf, some say fully 500, mostly cartoons, but covering every phase of the game. Frost's golf art is almost a history of the dress and customs from 1895 to 1910.

Golfing art has been scattered to the four winds, as has the art of other games. There is for the collector no staked out happy hunting grounds for the art of the visored-plus-four duffer of another age. Like gold, it's where you find it.

SHIELD OF CELLINI?

Has there really been a million dollar Cellini shield with an attached morion (16th century open helmet) "running around loose" in these United States?

Well, maybe it hasn't been exactly running loose but it came out of an obscure past. Some years ago an antiques dealer, Flora MacDougall, found the shield in a junk shop in San Francisco, Calif.

She bought it for $8 and hung it on her shop door to give it "that certain quality." A customer recognized it for what it seems to be. Miss MacDougall took it in from the weather.

Later she showed it to an authority on Italian art, Father Luigi Slocchetti who had studied at the Vatican Galleries in Rome. He, too, pronounced it a Cellini.

Miss MacDougall moved to New York and later went to Europe to find out more about her shield. Eventually, through the Marchesa Helen Spinola, Miss MacDougall had a conference with Senator Adolph Venturi, a famous historian on Italian art.

He pronounced the shield either the work of Cellini or of a contemporary of Cellini's, artist Francesco Salviati. There the matter hung!

In time the shield (and helmet) which is part of the shield was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ryal. They loaned the piece to the Huntington Library where it was put on exhibit. It will be shown elsewhere, according to Stanley Ransom, Director of the Library. But eventually, it is hoped, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City, N. Y., will be able to establish its authenticity as a Cellini work of art beyond all doubt.

The shield (and helmet) is of iron. The detail of the decoration is so fine even the hairlines in the women portrayed on it stand out with amazing reality.

The Huntington Library will inform Mr. and Mrs. Ryal's son, Richard Ryal, Beverly Hills, Calif., if the shield is genuine. That request was made at the time the Ryals loaned the shield to the Library.

Cellini was a famous Italian artist of 16th century Florence, hence the million dollar appraisal of this rare antique iron work attributed to him.

MASON Coat-of-Arms

By HAZEL KRAFT EILERS

Arms: Argent a fesse azure in chief two lions' heads coupé of the last. Crest: A lion's head azure between two wings argent. On the arms and crest a mullet for difference.

INTERPRETATION

Translated into non-Heraldic terms: A silver (argent) shield charged across the center with a blue (azure) band (fesse). In the upper third of the shield (chief) two blue ("of the last" color named) lions' heads cut off at the neck (coupé). Crest: a lion's head of blue between two silver wings.

The fesse is one of the nine so-called Honourable Ordinaries, first symbols used to identify men encased in armour. The fesse, or band borne in the center of the shield, is the military belt or girdle of honour.

The lion is the king of beasts, and its symbol has always held a high place in Heraldry as the emblem of deathless courage. Guillim, an authority on Heraldic meanings, says of the lion: "It is the lively image of a good soldier, who must be valiant of courage, strong of body, politic in council, and a foe to fear." The lion's head bears the same meaning as the lion itself, as a part of a symbol carries the same meaning as the whole.

This illustration shows the shield, mantling, and helmet, but omits the crest. A Coat-of-Arms may be drawn without the crest, but a painting is not considered complete without being decorated with the mantling and helmet which the men wore in medieval times.

The mantling was a large scarf of heavy cloth or leather thrown over the helmet to protect the neck from the heat of the sun, the armour from rust, and to foil the enemy's sword.

The mantling must have the main color of the Coat-of-Arms on the outside, and the main metal for the lining.

A wreath of the colors should hold the mantling on to the helmet, and upon this wreath the crest rests. Wings in the crest are considered protectors of the other symbol, and, holding it in reverence, indicates its importance to the bearer.

This Mason Coat-of-Arms is found in Burke's GENERAL ARMORY. It is dated 1634 and is ascribed to the Mason family of London. Also, it is registered under the name of John Mason, Patentee of New Hampshire, in A ROLL OF ARMS published by the Committee on Heraldry of the New England Historic Genealogical Society.

John Mason was born in King's Lynn, co. Norfolk, England and baptized on the 11th of December 1586. His will, dated November 26, was proved December 22, 1635. He married Anne, second daughter of Edward Greene of London, goldsmith, on October 29, 1606. Her will was proved November 12, 1655.

Captain John and Anne (Greene) Mason had an only daughter, Anne, and she married Joseph Tufton. Their four children - John, Anne, Robert, and Mary Tufton - are mentioned in their grandfather's will.

In disposing of his "vexatious principality" (as termed by Savage), the grandfather left to his "grandchild Robert Tufton . . . my said manor of Mason hall in New England, called Masonia, providing also that he alter his surname and surname himself Mason, before he shall be capable to enjoy the said manor."

The same condition was attached to the property left to his grandson, John. However, this John Tufton died without issue. Of Robert, Savage says: "Robert, Portsmouth, grandson of the patentee, named by the king, a counselor of the Providence, in 1680, died 1638, leaving sons John Tufton Mason and Robert Tufton Mason to keep up the righteous but useless claim."

Volume 56 (1902) of the NEW ENGLAND REGISTER contains important material on this Mason family as it covers the will of Captain John Mason; the will of his father John Mason, of King's Lynn, merchant (proved March 9, 1591-2); and the will of Edward Greene of St. John Zacharies, London, goldsmith, dated January 12, 1618-9 (the father-in-law of Capt. John Mason).

A book published in 1887 by Charles Wesley Tuttle is entitled:

CAPTAIN JOHN MASON - FOUNDER OF NEW HAMPSHIRE. This work gives the Mason pedigree back through four generations and should be studied for details concerning his life.

There were many Mason immigrants in the early 1600's. Five men of the name are listed in Virkus' COMPENDIUM OF AMERICAN GENEALOGY. Major John Mason was born about 1600 and died in 1672. He came from England to Dorchester, Mass. in 1630 or 1632. He settled at Windsor, Conn. and was a leader in military and civil affairs.

He married Anna, daughter of the Rev. Robert Peck. A letter from Major John Mason in the Massachusetts Archives has a seal in wax with the Peck Coat-of-Arms, so presumably he did not have one of his own.

Another colonist, Captain George Mason, was born in 1626 in Staffordshire, England. He belonged (according to DuBellet's PROMINENT VIRGINIA FAMILIES) to the family of Masons of Warwickshire, domiciled at "Mason Croft," Stratford-on-Avon.

Captain George Mason was a Royalist in the contest between King Charles and Parliament, and after the Battle of Worcester in 1651 he escaped to Norfolk, Va. with his wife Mary, his brother William, and his nephew who removed to Boston, Mass. DuBellet ascribes the following Arms to George Mason: "Argent on a point with three battlements, charged each with a fleur-de-lis, and on the middle battlement a dove with wings displayed proper."

Sampson Mason, immigrant ancestor, was also a soldier, but he fought WITH Cromwell's army. He arrived in Dorchester, Mass. from England in 1651. He was a shoemaker and he died in Rehoboth, Mass. September 15, 1676. He married Mary Butterworth and their family consisted of 13 children.

Cutter's NEW ENGLAND FAMILIES (1914) contains material on his life and lists his children, but does not mention anything concerning a Coat-of-Arms. However, an article in AMERICAN FAMILIES published by the American Historical Society, Inc., New York, ascribes the same armorial bearing to Sampson as the one listed in "A Roll of Arms," and as illustrated above.

Some others of the name were: John Mason of Norfolk, Va., in 1640; Lt. Francis Mason (1595-1648) of Lower Norfolk County, Virginia; and Hugh Mason (1605/6-1678) who came from England in the "Frances" in 1634 and settled at Watertown, Mass.

The Mason name is listed 20 times in Burke's General Armory. And a variety of Armorial Bearings is given for Mason families seated in Cornwall, Huntingdon, Hertford, Kent, Warwick, York, Bucks, Salop, and Norfolk counties in England - plus other Mason families seated in Ireland and Scotland.

As "mason" was a trade-name, no doubt each locality had its own mason, or "waller." Sometimes a particular trade was retained by most of the male branches of a family for generations, and thus became stationary family names, so no blood connection should be assumed between one Mason family and another Mason family. Accordingly, a Mason should be sure of his connections before assuming a Coat-of-Arms.

colorful collection of Don Carlos Prieto in the microscopic Mexican town of Tecolutla, on the Atlantic coast of Mexico.

Tecolutla is at the mouth of a river which runs out to flat sand coast stretching 30 miles in both directions, north and south from Tecolutla. Don Carlos has his own magnificent home in Mexico City, almost up against the famed two-color home of Mexico's most famous artist, the late Diego Rivera. But, like so many of us in the United States, Don Carlos has a country home and for this he chose the fertile coast land which stretches north from Vera Cruz to Tampico. It is a wild land, ideal for hunting, and for all kinds of boating and deep sea fishing. The coastal people are, for the most part, fisher folk, and theirs is a sea tradition. From his home base in Tecolutla Don Carlos has been able to develop vast acreages of coconut palms, lining the coastal strip in great magnificence for many miles. Inland are his orange groves, or fincas, with countless trees laden with enough fruit for much of Mexico.

If you roam these tropical beaches in summer, as I have done, again and again, you will find few shells only an occasional bivalve or a few sand dollars. But in January and February, when the wild storms, called nortes, blow along the coast, shells are torn from the deep and are cast up on the endless miles of sandy shore. After such storms who can resist a little beachcombing? Thus Don Carlos began what has grown into his present superb collection.

This collection has made of the Tecolutla house, shown in the picture, almost a small shell museum. Set out in the living room, in especially designed glass cabinets, is a magnificent collection of both local and world shells. Some of the prizes of the collection are a complete exhibit of shells of the local coast, all labeled and set forth in series in wall cases. I am grateful to Don Carlos for his gift of a complete set of photographs of this collection of all the shells of the locality. These include the elusive deep sea Lamp Shell, Xancus angulata Solander, and a huge Horse Conch, Fasciolaria gigantea Kien. One of the most startling shells is a Cassis tuberosa. L., a King Helmet so large that it is almost too heavy to lift.

The central cabinet, set as a low glass-topped table in the center of the living room is bright with color specimens from everywhere, like the gold and purple Pecten nobilis, Conus virgo, Oliva porphyria, a huge Paper Nautilus and some flashy Australian Volutes. Here is one of the few collections used as a superb form of basic interior decoration, a remarkable feature of this unique sea-coast home.
